DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Built in the second quarter of the eighteenth century, Salubria is a two-story, hipped roof structure with two large corbel-capped chimneys on the interior ends. Notable features of the Flemish bond brickwork are the segmental arches over the windows and basement openings and the beveled watertable; a light coat of stucco, added later, has partially worn off. The central hall has a high paneled dado consisting of a series of narrow horizontal panels over broad rectangular ones. On the west wall is an arched entranceway from which the stair curves upward to the second level. The hall is off-center, making the two rooms on the east smaller than those on the west; all have corner fireplaces. Notable rooms are the fully-paneled northeast room with its corner fireplace framed by pilasters supporting a full Doric entablature, and the northwest room with paneled chimney breast, dado, and framed cupboard built into the wall.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Salubria was built by John Thompson, Anglican minister to Saint Mark's Parish. According to tradition, the house was built in 1742 at the time of Thompson's marriage to the widow of Governor Alexander Spotswood. Following Lady Spotswood's death, Thompson married the daughter of Philip Rootes and left the house to her at his death in 1772. The house later belonged to their son, Philip Rootes Thompson, who sold it in 1792. In 1802 the Hansbrough family purchased the property and held it until 1853 when it was sold to the Grayson family. In 1825 Lafayette, while on his grand tour of America, was entertained with a dinner at Salubria. Doctor Cary T. Grayson, personal physician to President Woodrow Wilson, was born at Salubria, and the property is still in the hands of his descendants.

Salubria is an exceedingly simple building which, at the same time, is surprisingly elegant. Compact and refined, with a minimum of decoration, this mansion achieves its design quality with excellent proportions and composition enhanced by the subtle rhythm of the segmental arches. This exterior finesse, combined with fine interior paneling and the unusual stairway, creates a Virginia mansion of the highest quality.
