Constructed of brick laid in Flemish bond with random glazed headers, the principal facade of Sabine Hall is seven-bays wide. The roof, which has been lowered, undoubtedly was a higher hip, similar to that formerly at Carter's Grove. The windows are decorated with stone sills and stone lintels with projecting keystones. The central bay on each long front is in the form of a narrow stone pavilion which is built entirely of stone, and is rusticated the entire height. The house was freestanding with separate brick dependencies until 1764 when the kitchen, which has since been. demolished, was connected by a covered way to the house. In 1929, a one and-a-half story west wing was built to balance an earlier but not original west wing. C_{CC}

One of the most outstanding features of Sabine Hall is its fully paneled central hall, 18' x 48'. The superb staircase with its scrolled soffit and twisted walnut balusters ascends in a cross hall. Original woodwork is also found in the library and upstairs hall. Of the woodwork in the central and cross hall, William B. O'Neal stated in Architecture in Virginia that "...its pilasters, splendid entablature and the curious construction of the staircase itself make it one of the most superb architectural documents in the country".

The outlines of the original formal garden overlooking the Rappahannock River remain.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

Sabine Hall was erected about 1730 by Landon Carter (1710-1778), son of Robert "King" Carter of Corotoman. Landon Carter was a member of the House of Burgesses, and the author of numerous political tracts including one, written in 1765, which was concerned with the repeal of the Stamp Act. The house has never been out of the possession of direct descendants of the builder, and its rooms contain a splendid collection of family portraits and furniture. Even in its present altered form, Sabine Hall, with its fine stone trim and interior woodwork, remains one of the most richly appointed of Virginia's early-Georgian mansions. Its setting on a ridge overlooking the Rappahannock River has been little altered since the eighteenth century.
