STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

The first congregation of Timber Ridge was organized in 1746 by John Blair, a Presbyterian minister who was a native of northern Ireland. The congregation was organized under the auspices of the New Light Presbyterians, a revivalist oriented branch of the Calvinist denomination. The first meeting house was a log structure and stood about two miles north of the present meeting house. Permission to worship was granted by the Augusta County Court on May 20, 1748.

One of the early leaders of the congregation was John Houston, greatgrandfather of Sam Houston, President of the Republic of Texas, who himself was born at Timber Ridge Plantation, just south of the present church. It is said that it was John Houston who inspired the congregation to build the present stone meeting house.

The second or present meeting house was built in 1755-56. As the meeting house was built on the frontier during the French and Indian War, its stout limestone walls were constructed so that the building could be converted into a fort if necessary. There is a legend that the women of the congregation aided in the construction of the building, hauling sand for the mortar by packsaddle from the nearby South River.

Timber Ridge served as an important meeting place of the early Valley Presbyterians. The Hanover Presbytery met there in 1775, 1776, 1777, and 1784. Timber Ridge also had early ties with what is now Washington and Lee University. In 1776 the Augusta Academy, founded in 1773 by the Hanover Presbytery, was moved to Timber Ridge where it was supported entirely by the congregation for several years until it was moved again to near Lexington. Augusta Academy was renamed Liberty Hall in honor of the American Revolution; later it was moved to Lexington where it became first Washington College and finally Washington and Lee University. The old academy building stood near the meeting house until around 1838.

Although Timber Ridge has been considerably enlarged and altered in appearance during its more than two hundred years of existence, it remains the second oldest Presbyterian meeting house in the Valley of Virginia.
