DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Branch Building is a two-story structure with a four-bay front and measures 26' wide by 140' deep. It is built on a common bond brick foundation and has a cast-iron facade with side and rear walls of brick laid in common bond. The street level portion of the facade consists of a four-bay arcade composed of free-standing Corinthian columns on pedestals, supporting semicircular arches. The arcade forms a screen across a split in levels in the lower portion of the building. In the western-most bay of the arcade a flight of steps ascends to the door of the first floor, while in the other three bays steps descend to the area and to the entrance to the lower level. Behind the arcade, the arch motif is repeated in architectural features which form the front wall of the first floor and the lower level which are executed in wood, while those of the arcade itself are in cast iron. This arcade supports a full Corinthian entablature which forms the pedestal base of the second floor. The four bays of the second floor are separated by single engaged Corinthian columns with Corinthian pilasters at the edges of the facade. The engaged columns of the second floor support an engaged balustrade which forms the pedestal for the engaged columns between the bays of the third floor. The space between the third and fourth floor is also in the form of an engaged balustrade. Crowning the facade is a large, full Corinthian entablature with a relatively thin architrave and a wide frieze. The frieze is ornamented with four rosettes; the cornice features modillions, dentils and eggs and darts.

A side stair hall entered from the exterior gives access to the main office on the first floor. The first floor has been greatly altered, and no original woodwork save that of the stair hall survives. The original plan probably consisted of two main rooms, behind which was an open court separating the main block of the building from a one-story-on-highbasement structure that probably housed living quarters. The court has been enclosed, and all of this space has been converted into modern offices.
