ABSTRACT

The Phase III Architectural Survey Update of Arlington County was conducted between January and September 2012 by the architectural and historic preservation firm of EHT Tracerics, Inc. under the direction of the Arlington County's Historic Preservation Program in the Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development. The project consisted of the reconnaissance survey of 715 properties encompassing approximately 376 acres that represent the areas and periods of significance of Arlington County as defined in the Phase I Architectural Survey Report, prepared in 1996. This most recent survey focused on the completion of the reconnaissance survey with the documentation of 431 properties in Barcroft (Neighborhood Service Area D), and 248 properties in Waycroft-Woodlawn and 36 properties in High View Park (Neighborhood Service Area A).

As stated in the historic context, completed as part of the Phase I Architectural Survey in 1996, the period of significance for Arlington County began in 1674 with the patenting of the Howson Tract. The development and growth of the county was directly related to Washington, D.C., and the federal presence as early as 1791, when the land was surveyed as part of the nation's capital. Returned to the Commonwealth of Virginia by the United States Congress in 1846, Arlington officially separated from the City of Alexandria in 1870. Adopting the name Arlington County in 1920, the community then began its greatest phase of development, growing from a population of 16,000 in 1920 to 207,627 in 2010. Today, almost all of the land in Arlington has been developed and consists of extensive single-family residential neighborhoods and defined areas where commercial buildings, offices, and multiple-family dwellings dominate.

The Phase I on-site reconnaissance survey, which was to consist of 750 properties, centered on the residential neighborhoods of southern Arlington, specifically Neighborhood Service Areas F, G, and H, as well as selected Target Areas. The substantial number of properties within this part of southern Arlington County that had reached the fifty-year-age limit set by the federal and state governments prompted a reduction of the date guidelines. The on-site survey included the Target Areas -- Nauck, Columbia Heights West, and Arna Valley -- and 95% of Neighborhood Service Area H with a total of 761 resources documented. Fairlington was comprehensively surveyed during the National Register historic district process and, therefore, was not included as part of the documentation undertaken by Tracerics. Phase II, conducted in 1997, was the continuation of the reconnaissance survey process within specified Neighborhood Service Areas F, G, and H. This phase of on-site survey identified 1,015 properties, thereby comprehensively documenting all resources erected prior to 1936 in southern Arlington County, including Douglas Park. Phase III of the project included the identification, documentation, and assessment of 776 additional properties in central Arlington County. Specifically, during this stage of the project, Neighborhood Service Area D, Barcroft, Clarendon, and Columbia Forest in Service Area F, and the community of North Highlands in Service Area E were targeted.

Phase IV focused on the major commercial and transportation sector known as the Rosslyn-Ballston or Metro Corridor. Running northeast to southwest, the corridor roughly flanks Wilson Boulevard from Rosslyn to George Mason Drive in Ballston within Neighborhood Service Areas D and E. A small portion of Service Area C is also included in the Corridor, specifically in the neighborhood of Bluemont (formerly Stonewall Jackson) to the east of George Mason Drive. The Corridor, one of Arlington's two Metrorail transit corridors targeted for high-density development, is approximately three-quarters of a mile wide and three miles long. A total of 805 properties were documented in the eastern part of the Corridor during Phase IV. Phase V continued the survey efforts of Phase IV, focusing on the documentation of 810 properties at the western end of the Rosslyn-Ballston Corridor. The work completed the documentation of Ashton Heights and Lyon Village, progressing into Ballston-Virginia Square. Phase VI recorded 1,010 buildings in Ballston-Virginia Square in Service Area D and a portion of Bluemont in Service Area C, Waycroft-Woodlawn and Langston-Brown in Service Area A, and Glebe and Waverly Hills in Service Area B. This has resulted in the comprehensive survey of the Rosslyn-Ballston or Metro Corridor to include all properties constructed prior to 1954.

Phase VIIA focused on the documentation of 550 properties, the majority of which were located in Waverly Hills. This work was conducted specifically to aid in the preparation of a National Register of Historic Places historic district nomination. Similarly, the Fillmore Garden Apartments in the neighborhood of Penrose and a section of Columbia Forest were also included in the survey. The Phase VIIA survey was concluded in the neighborhood of Woodmont, which is located in Service Area B. Phase VIIB recorded 579 properties in Neighborhood Service Area B. These historic properties were located in the neighborhoods of Old Glebe, Gulf Branch, Bellevue Forest, Donaldson Run, and Dover-Crystal. Properties added to the Penrose Historic District in Neighborhood Service Area G were also surveyed.

Phase VIII encompassed the recordation of 1,110 properties in the northern part of the county in 2004. Neighborhoods documented as part of that survey included Bellevue Forest, Country Club Hills, Donaldson Run, Dover-Crystal, Gulf Branch, Old Glebe, Westover, and Woodmont (Parkway) in Neighborhood Service Areas A and B. Multi-family resources removed from the Penrose Historic District in Neighborhood Service Area G were also included in this survey. No properties dating prior to 1955 were identified in the neighborhoods of Chain Bridge Forest and Rivercrest. All historic properties constructed prior to 1955 were included in the survey, unless the property owner or resident objected, or the resource no longer retained sufficient integrity of design and materials.

Completed in 2006, Phase IX consisted of the reconnaissance survey of 810 properties in the neighborhoods of Arlingwood, Belleview Forest, Old Dominion, Riverwood, Stafford-Albemarle-Glebe, Woodmont (Parkway), and Yorktown (partial) in Neighborhood Service Areas A and B. As a result of the survey, all of Neighborhood Service Area B has been documented. A few resources outside the period of significance for the Westover Historic District, listed in the National Register of Historic Places in May 2006, were also included in this survey phase. Additionally, six non-historic resources identified for their historical or architectural significance were included in the survey to ensure the recordation of these important properties. All historic properties constructed prior to 1948 were included in the survey, unless the property owner or resident objected, or the resource no longer retained sufficient integrity of design and materials. It should also be noted that properties previously listed in or determined eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places were not resurveyed unless such work was warranted. If a property was not documented for those above-mentioned reasons, it was noted on the survey maps.

Phase X encompassed the reconnaissance survey of 1,010 properties in the neighborhoods of Yorktown, Rock Spring, Williamsburg, Leeway Overlee, Tara-Leeway Heights, Dominion Hills, and Boulevard Manor in Neighborhood Service Areas A and C. Eight historic properties in the neighborhood of Old Glebe that were not previously recorded because of their concealed location adjacent to the 38-acre Gulf Branch Park were also included in this survey phase. Additionally, the two apartment buildings at 3601 and 3701 5th Street South in Alcova Heights were recorded as part of the Arlington X survey phase. Unless the primary resource no longer retained sufficient integrity of design and materials, all historic properties constructed prior to 1948 in Yorktown, Rock Spring, Williamsburg, Boulevard Manor, and Dominion Hills were surveyed. Properties constructed prior to 1943 in Leeway Overlee and Tara-Leeway Heights were recorded to the reconnaissance level.

The final phase of survey, Phase XI, recorded 1,012 historic properties. The survey focused on the residential neighborhoods in the northwestern section of the county, specifically Dominion Hills, Boulevard Manor, Bluemont, Madison Manor, and Arlington-East Falls Church in Neighborhood Service Areas A and C. As part of the documentation required for historic district nominations, 103 properties in Highland Park-Overlee Knolls were included in this survey phase. These properties will be assessed for their contribution to the significance and historic context of the Highland Park-Overlee Knolls Historic District. The survey included 103 properties, historic and non-historic, on the north side of 22nd Street North in Highland Park-Overlee Knolls and those properties in Westover on North Longfellow Street and the west side of North Lexington Street, north of 16th Street North and south of 18th Street North. These buildings are located within what was originally platted as Overlee Knolls and Fostoria, now known as Highland Park. The survey also included the two buildings worthy of note – First Federal Savings and Loan Association Building (3108-3110 Columbia Pike) and Gulf Branch Nature Center (3608 Military Road).

The first update survey, the Phase I Survey Update, included the documentation of 329 properties in 2010. The first stage of the survey update focused on the completion of the Bluemont neighborhood, and thus completion of the comprehensive county-wide survey begun in 1996. A total of 65 properties in Bluemont were recorded; this neighborhood has been comprehensively documented to 1943. The portion of Bluemont located in the Metro Corridor was previously surveyed to 1956 as part of Phase IV. The survey commenced in Douglas Park, a neighborhood first recorded as part of Phase II. The initial target date was 1936, thus much of the World War II-era housing was not documented during the 1997 effort. Now with a 1956 target date, a total of 264 properties were recorded as part of this Phase I Survey Update in Douglas Park.

Phase II Survey Update, the most recent survey completed in Arlington County, recorded 323 properties. The goal was to update previous survey efforts within six separate neighborhoods, capturing all primary resources erected prior to 1959. The neighborhoods of Arlington View, first recorded as part of the first and second survey phases, and North Highlands, which was included in the Phase III survey effort, were comprehensively documented with 1959 as the target date. Columbia Forest was first recorded as part of Phase III and was completed to a 1951 target date; no extant historic resources dating from between 1952 and 1959 were identified. Additional efforts were undertaken in Waycroft-Woodlawn, which was first documented in Phase VI with a 1936 target date.

Due to the density of historic residential buildings in this neighborhood, the current survey identified only resources constructed in 1936 to 1941. Foxcroft Heights, recognized as a possible historic district, was surveyed initially as part of the first two survey phases and comprehensively recorded during this update phase. All historic resources in Foxcroft Heights predate 1940.

The third phase of the updating survey attempted to record all buildings erected between 1936 and 1959, utilizing the Sanborn Fire Insurance maps and the Arlington County building permit cards to verify construction dates. The survey began in Waycroft-Woodlawn, concluding the comprehensive survey of this National Register-eligible neighborhood. The survey anticipated the recordation of 262 properties, of which 34 had been razed or substantially altered. The survey continued in the neighborhood of Barcroft, expecting the documentation of 467 properties. Despite the many changes this neighborhood has undergone, a total of 431 properties were recorded. The survey concluded in High View Park, also known as Langston-Brown. This neighborhood, which has experienced development in the second half of the twentieth century in areas, was expected to have 88 properties eligible for recordation. A total of 36 properties were recorded, with an additional 75 properties remaining in the neighborhood to be documented (anticipated recordation as part of the Update IV Survey, 2013).

With the completion of this third update survey, the master DSS database for Arlington County contains 11,604 properties recorded by EHT Tracerics since 1996.

Each resource documented was architecturally defined, physically assessed, photographed with black-and-white film, and evaluated for its contribution to the historic context of Arlington County. The impressive number of historic properties within the targeted survey areas forced methodology based largely on historic maps, permit cards, and county needs. Initially, EHT Tracerics, Inc. used the 1936 and 1959 Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps and the 1943 Franklin Survey Maps as the best means to properly identify historic resources to be surveyed. Recently, however, permit cards that indicate the exact date of construction and subsequent alterations for resources built between 1936 and the early 1980s were provided by the Historic Preservation Program in the Arlington County Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development. Therefore, the date of construction for properties was based on the historic maps, permit cards, and visual inspection of the resources at the time of the survey. Unlike some of the previous survey phases, the primary criterion for this survey update was the construction date of the primary resource and its physical integrity.

The reconnaissance-level survey of Arlington County has been a comprehensive study that has included eleven initial phases spanning thirteen years; this is the third phase of survey update, an effort that began in 2010. Although the survey was inclusive within the target survey dates, the availability of newly discovered archival documentation, such as the permit cards, should continue to be reviewed for those areas in the southern part of the county, especially those most threatened by demolition and modern development. Further, the following neighborhoods should be revisited and those properties constructed between 1936 and 1959, as documented by the Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps and Franklin Survey Maps and permit cards, should be recorded: Alcova Heights, Douglas Park (north of 16th Street South), GlebeWood, and High View Park (Langston-Brown). In the northern part of the county, where the density of post-war development restricted a more comprehensive survey of all historic properties, at least pre-1960, the neighborhoods of Leeway Overlee and Tara-Leeway Heights should be examined further.

INTRODUCTION

Project Purpose and Goals

The Architectural Survey Update Report, Phase III of Arlington County, Virginia, is the third stage of a multi-phase project seeking to update the documentation of areas previously surveyed to pre-World War II dates, especially those areas surveyed prior to the availability of permit cards. The first six phases of the county-wide survey project were funded directly under the terms of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources' Cost-Share Program. Beginning in December 2002, Arlington County has contracted directly with EHT Tracerics to complete the reconnaissance survey. This third survey update phase was to include the survey and documentation of approximately 817 properties, a detailed survey report, and recommendations regarding further study of any, or all, of the resources retaining significance and integrity within the historic context established in Phase I (1996). The survey was conducted between January and September 2012 and recorded 715 properties.

Scope of Work

The project anticipated the survey of previously identified properties as well as those resources not previously identified that met the age guideline established for each neighborhood within the targeted survey areas. The survey areas, as outlined in the contract, were to include unsurveyed resources erected prior to 1959 in Waycroft-Woodlawn, Barcroft, and High View Park. Each resource was to be assessed, surveyed, documented, and photographed to the reconnaissance level on Virginia Department of Historic Resources field forms. This process was to allow for a thorough study of each resource and its building materials, architectural style, use, and date of construction substantiated by historic maps, permit cards, and oral histories. All of the properties surveyed were to be entered into the Department of Historic Resources' Data Sharing Software (DSS) database. Utilizing DSS, a final survey report was produced that presented the findings of the third phase of the survey update and allowed for a comparison of each of the resources identified in all previous survey and documentation phases. Within the established significance, each property was to be assessed for its contribution with recommendations for further study as a potential landmark or as part of an historic district.

Staffing

Funded by Arlington County, Survey Update Phase III of Arlington County was contracted to EHT Tracerics, Inc., an architectural history firm specializing in historic preservation. Laura V. Trieschmann served as Project Director/Senior Architectural Historian, responsible for overseeing the completion of the project, writing the final survey report, and conducting the final assessment of the resources and neighborhoods. The on-site survey, data entry, production of the survey products, and research was conducted by architectural historians Kate Ritson, Emma Waterloo, Maria Dayton, and Paul Weishar. Erin Howe assisted with the final production of the survey products.

HISTORIC THEMES

The Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) has developed eighteen historic themes that capture the context of Virginia's heritage from the earliest times. These themes are defined in the Survey Findings section of this report. Whenever possible, the documented resources were placed within the eighteen historic context themes to allow for a better understanding of the development impacts affecting the survey areas. Only seven of the eighteen themes are discussed here as they pertain to the extant historic resources within the Phase III Survey Update of Arlington County. The themes identified were Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, Commerce/Trade, Social, Religion, Education, and Health Care/Medicine. The remaining themes—Landscape, Industry/Processing/Extraction, Settlement, Transportation/Communication, Military/Defense, Technology/Engineering, Subsistence/Agriculture, Funerary, Recreation/Arts Ethnicity/Immigration, and Government/Law/Political—were not identified.

As the survey efforts moved northward in Arlington County, the number of themes identified has fluctuated and diminished. During Phase I, eleven of the eighteen themes were documented—Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, Commerce/Trade, Religion, Funerary, Education, Social, Settlement Patterns, Recreation/Arts, Military/Defense, and Ethnicity/Immigrations. Phase II included fourteen of the eighteen themes—Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, Commerce/Trade, Religion, Funerary, Education, Settlement Patterns, Government/Law/Political, Military/Defense, Recreation/Arts, Social, Subsistence/Agriculture, Transportation/Engineering, and Ethnicity/Immigration. Phase III identified resources relating to eight of the themes—Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, Commerce/Trade, Education, Religion, Funerary, Settlement, and Social. Phase IV survey recorded the same eight themes with the addition of the Industry/Processing/Extraction theme. The Phase V survey documented seven of the themes—Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, Commerce/Trade, Education, Religion, Social, and Transportation/Communication themes. The same themes were identified during Phase VI with the exception of Transportation/Communication. Instead, the Funerary theme was documented minimally. Phase VIIA identified the Architecture/Community Planning, Domestic, and Commerce/Trade themes. Phase VIIB included only Architecture/Community Planning and Domestic themes. Phases VIII, IX, and X have continued to document many of the same themes previously identified during this comprehensive survey of Arlington County, reflecting the establishment of self-sufficient neighborhoods bounded by secondary transportation routes and contemporaneous residential communities. The final phase of the comprehensive survey included Technology/Engineering and Subsistence/Agriculture, which are not common themes in this county, particularly in northern Arlington County.

The change in the number of themes documented during each phase of the comprehensive survey may be attributed to the suburban context of central and northern Arlington County and the many planned residential neighborhoods that developed during the second and third quarters of the twentieth century. Arlington County's close proximity to Washington, D.C., as well as its importance as an outlying component of the nation's capital, appears to have reduced the thematic diversity in the northern region of the county. The loss of physical reminders of the county's past as a nineteenth-century rural community, and later, as a turn-of-the-twentieth-century streetcar suburb, tends to increase the significance of properties related to the minimally represented themes identified throughout the entire survey process. This is especially true for properties related to the Subsistence/Agriculture, Transportation/Communication, Commerce/Trade, Settlement Patterns, Religion, and Military/Defense themes. Although a few properties have been documented throughout the many phases of survey for their association with these themes, they tend to be examples dating from the second and third quarters of the twentieth century, thus indicating that pre-twentieth-century examples are significant as rare examples of any given property type.

The survey update was focused on historic properties not recorded in neighborhoods that had been documented previously, capturing residential properties that represented the Architecture/Community Planning and Domestic themes. Single examples of a commercial building, school, medical office, and clubhouse were identified. Additionally, two historic churches were recorded. These resources are typical for residential neighborhoods, supporting the daily lives of the residents and making the community's self-sufficient.

THEME: ARCHITECTURE/COMMUNITY PLANNING

The areas covered by the Phase III survey update of Arlington County experienced the greatest surge of development in the middle part of the twentieth century, extending from the pre-World War period to the mid-century's Modern Movement. This can be seen in all three of the neighborhoods targeted for survey—Waycroft-Woodlawn, Barcroft, and High View Park.

The survey update recorded a variety of different styles and forms of buildings, just as in the comprehensive survey. Yet, overall the more common forms included the two-story simplified rectangular "box" and the Cape Cod, particularly in Waycroft-Woodlawn and Barcroft. A number of minimal traditional forms were noted in all three neighborhoods. Overwhelmingly, the Colonial Revival style dominated the landscape of the survey areas. The ornamentation was minimal as was typical for the second quarter of the twentieth century, reduced to just high-style entry surrounds on the single-family dwellings. The Tudor Revival style was also prevalent, but was largely confined to the neighborhood of Waycroft-Woodlawn with a limited number in Barcroft. The single-family dwellings of Waycroft-Woodlawn exhibited asymmetrical gables with steeply pitched slopes, diamond-paned casement windows, pseudo four-centred arched entry openings, half-timbering with stucco, and exterior brick chimneys set off-center on the facades. Elements of the Modern Movement were noted throughout the survey areas, displaying wrapping corner window openings, picture windows, varying exterior cladding materials, integrated planters directing visitors to the main entries, and shallow pitched roofs with expansive eaves.

As was noted in previous survey phases, comparable building styles and forms are commonly grouped together in neighborhoods, documenting the influences of the home builder and operable builder in the improvement of the subdivisions following their platting. Similarity in design, for which most mid-twentieth-century communities are known, was created by the home builder, who was able to reduce costs by taking advantage of mass-produced building elements and purchasing materials in greater volume. As is evidenced throughout the Phase III survey area, these home builders improved a select number of lots, selling them before investing in additional property and building materials. A number of the builders associated with the development of the Phase III survey update area were noted in previous survey areas, thus illustrating that no one developer monopolized Arlington County.

Bungalow/Craftsman

The survey effort recorded six Craftsman-style buildings, all within the Barcroft neighborhood. Only three of those identified present the bungalowoid form and are not ornamented in detailing typical of the Craftsman style. The other three examples have rectangular forms augmented by various elements typical of the style. In the twentieth century, traditional domestic forms, such as those employed by popular architectural styles, were often interpreted for economy and convenience, an effect of the tremendous need for housing in the Washington metropolitan area. The resulting bungalow mimicked the plan and massing traditionally associated with the fashionable Queen Anne style; yet, the bungalowoid form was invariably one to one-and-a-half stories in height. The bungalow is generally covered by a low-pitched, intersecting gable roof that encompasses the often-wrapping and deep inset porch. The modest arrangement of the wood-frame buildings made them one of the most popular low- to middle-income domestic forms in growing suburban communities like those in Arlington County.

The Craftsman-style elements commonly adorning buildings in the Phase III survey update areas include rock-faced concrete-block or pebble-dash foundations, full-width front porches or entry porches, wide overhanging eaves, clipped gables, and asymmetrical fenestration. Unlike many of the examples recorded in previous surveys, the porch supports are modest and simplified, reduced to simple thin square posts; this was also noted in the Phase II survey update. The majority of the examples recorded were modestly adorned, utilizing decorative building materials and roof forms as ornamentation. This was a reflection of builders' attempt to reduce costs and promptly provide housing.

The majority of the examples noted in this survey update, which focused on the recordation of buildings primarily constructed between 1935 and 1959, are located in the neighborhood of Barcroft. These include the houses at 1100 South Pershing Drive (000-7818-0057), 4411 6th Street South (000-7818-0357), 4617 8th Road South (000-7818-0393), 412 South Taylor Street (000-7818-0362), and 812 South Taylor Street (000-7818-0411). The house at 4760 6th Street South (000-7818-0191) exhibits oversized elements of the Craftsman style, rather than the more modest expression this architectural design commonly expected at the time of its construction about 1935.

Classical Revival

The Classical Revival was based on the neoclassical architecture of eighteenth-century France and England. Popular in America between the 1890s and 1950s, the fashion favored the French Neoclassical, which provided a striking alternative to the ostentatious sculptural ornament associated with the Beaux Arts style. By contrast, the style was subdued and dignified, although equally monumental in scale. Facades were markedly symmetrical and punctuated by rhythmic rows of columns, windows, and entry doors. A grand two-story portico often emphasized the centrality of the design. The single example recorded in the Phase III Survey Update is an excellent example the Classical Revival style, replete with an oversized plan, projecting wings, and monumental pediment.

Located at 1207 North Buchanan Street (000-4229-0323), the house was constructed in the summer of 1940 for Ettie E. Jenkins by builder R.B. Shull in the Waycroft subdivision. The structure, veneered in brick, is three bays wide and three bays deep, but almost twice as wide as the typical rectangular form common to Arlington County. It is covered by a side-gabled roof with a molded cornice and wide frieze. Brick chimneys with corbeled caps rise from both side elevations. Fenestration is modest, consisting of 6/6 double-hung windows framed by operable louvered shutters. The openings have rowlock brick sills but lack lintel detailing. The centrally located entry opening is ornately framed by wood surround encompassing sidelights and a broken pediment with urn. The full-height portico has four Tuscan columns of wood and two brick pilasters supporting a wide entablature with plain frieze and ogee-molded cornice. The tympanum of the portico is covered in weatherboard siding and finished with a raking cornice and circular window.

Colonial Revival

The Colonial Revival style emerged in the American psyche through both literature and the built environment. Restoration architects and early historic preservationists embraced the Colonial Revival style following the restoration efforts at Colonial Williamsburg and other historic houses such as Mount Vernon and Stratford Hall in Virginia. These significant restoration projects created a preservation ethic that resounded nationwide. The theories of the Colonial Revival movement were espoused in popular magazines such as Harper's Weekly, Architectural Record, and The American Historical Review that catered to the educational desires of the upper- and upper-middle classes. Articles were written by leading promoters of the movement including Fiske Kimball and Lawrence Kocher, who both headed the Fine Arts program at the University of Virginia during the 1920s. These early advocates attempted to impose a pure American idiom on an increasingly diverse national population. Simultaneously, national organizations promoting awareness of America's colonial heritage, including the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames of America, and the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, were emerging and gaining increased popularity. A widespread interest in the preservation movement and historic architectural styles reached a crucial highpoint with John D. Rockefeller's interest in creating an educational and historical village in Williamsburg, Virginia. The ideology of Colonial Williamsburg, which was created in 1927, sought to serve as "a public sacrament, an outward and visible sign of spiritual truth and beauty, through which the lives of visitors to this place would be inspired and enriched."¹ The popularity of the Colonial Revival style was furthered by the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition of 1926 in Philadelphia and the creation of Henry Ford's Greenfield Village in Michigan in 1929. Yet, as much as the Colonial Revival movement aimed to inspire the nation as a whole, early reception was limited to the upper- and upper-middle classes who read the academic magazines, attended college lectures, employed high-style architects, and owned automobiles, thereby creating a leisure class capable of traveling to visit historic sites.

Developers and architects quickly embraced the Colonial Revival style to meet the housing needs of suburban Arlington County in the middle part of the twentieth century, both before and after World War II. The dispersion of the style to the suburbs and the mass production of Colonial Revival architectural elements prompted the detailing and form to become more modest and plain to meet the housing and economic demands of prospective homeowners in the second quarter of the twentieth century. Commonly found features of the style include accentuated main entry doors, symmetrically balanced facades, single and paired double-hung sash windows, exterior-end chimneys with plain caps, and side gable or hipped roofs. Most window openings are finished with rowlock brick sills, undersized/inoperable shutters, and lack lintels. Dormers, traditionally illuminating the Cape Cod form, have double-hung sash with siding on the cheeks and upper gables. A total of 487 Colonial Revival-style houses, presenting various forms including the Dutch Colonial Revival and the Cape Cod, were identified in the Phase III Survey Update.

Individuality within this repetition of form and style was commonly gained simply and often solely by varying the detailing framing the primary entry on the façade. Houses located in the Forest Park and Woodlawn Village subdivisions of Waycroft-Woodlawn, constructed by various builders, utilize a similar two-story rectangular form covered by a side-gabled roof. Extending three bays wide, the two-story houses all have a central entry flanked by double-hung window openings. Exterior-end brick chimneys rise from one of the two-bay-wide side elevations. The larger houses, such as the one at 1507 North Edison Street (000-4229-0175), are augmented by a one-story wing that projects from the side elevation. The slope of the site allows for a below-grade garage in the lower story of the wing. The house at 4923 15th Street North has a one-story screened porch extending from the side elevation. Variation between these houses is provided merely by the size of the fenestration and primary entry surrounds. The house on North Edison Street, constructed by builder Robert N. Brumback in 1939, has 8/8 windows with paneled spandrels, jack-arched brick lintels, and full-height louvered shutters on the first story. The main entry is ornately framed by a wide surround of wood with fluted pilasters supporting a semicircular pediment. The second story is symmetrically pierced by two squared 8/8 windows with rowlock sills of brick and louvered shutters. These windows, abutting the frieze of the entablature, flank an elongated octagonal-shaped window. The house on 15th Street North by Joe L. Gaddy in 1938 has wider 8/8 windows lacking lintels, spandrels, and operable shutters; the paneled shutters are undersized. The primary entry has a tall surround of wood composed of Tuscan pilasters supporting a wide frieze and ogee-molded pediments that rises over the stretcher-brick string course at the second story. The second-story windows are 6/6 sash, with rowlock sills and paneled shutters. The central opening is slightly smaller than the outer openings.

The Colonial Revival style was overwhelmingly the favored style of Arlingtonians, who demanded at least some ornamentation associated with this fashionable architectural expression be applied to their homes. Although most builders utilized the traditional two-story rectangular box form, a few in the Barcroft neighborhood constructed buildings with slightly projecting bays and cross-gabled roofs. The house at 4636 4th Street South (000-7818-0152) was completed in 1939 for Walter O'Hara by his development company. The structure has a two-story rectangular plan with side gable roof and exterior-end chimney. A front gable projects from the façade, capturing two bays. The single-leaf entry, ornately framed by a Colonial Revival surround, is located in the end bay and symmetrically balanced by a front-gabled wall dormer. The house at 615 South Stafford Street (000-7818-0281) stands in the George Mason Terrance subdivision. Completed in 1946 by the W.L. Roach Construction Corporation, the building has the basic two-story rectangular plan augmented by a projecting bay that gives it a “T” shaped plan. The front-gabled bay includes the stylized entry opening, capped by a broken pediment, and double-hung window. The second story has paired double-hung sash and round window with keystones in the upper gable end. The main block of the building has a single-car garage opening and one-story porch wing.

The typical Colonial Revival-style form was also accented by an overhanging second story, an element traditional to colonial buildings of the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. This interpretation of the popular style was enduring, ornamenting buildings in the survey area in the late 1930 through to the early 1950s. The earliest example noted was the house at 1506 North Edison Street (000-4229-0165). The concrete-block structure, façade in brick, has a two-story rectangular plan. Covered by a side-gabled roof with exterior-end chimneys projecting from both side elevations, the 1937 house is three bays wide and two bays deep. Builder Robert E. Rucker ornamented the façade with an overhanging second story clad in weatherboard siding. The triple windows of the first story, projecting within squared window bays, visually support the overhanging story, which shelters the centrally placed entry. A strikingly similar design was used by the Crestwood Construction Company when constructing the house at 4420 1st Street South (000-7818-0048) in 1950. The brick-veneered structure has an overhanging second story clad in siding on the façade. The design is modest, with stylistic ornamentation limited to the overhang and molded surround of the primary entry. Another example is located at 100 South Pershing Drive (000-7818-0015), which was constructed in 1951. This house, located in the Westwood subdivision of Barcroft, is constructed of wood frame clad in asbestos siding. Typical of the Modern Movement, the fenestration is slightly asymmetrical with oversized double-hung and paired windows.

Another variation of the style is the Dutch Colonial Revival, easily identified by its gambrel roof. The survey recorded nine examples: two in Waycroft-Woodlawn and seven in Barcroft. The form generally stands one story in height with a full story hidden within the gambrel roof. Front-gabled or full-width shed dormers provide additional illumination for the hidden story. The brick-veneered house at 4903 14th Street North (000-4229-0226) was constructed in 1936 in the Waycroft-Woodlawn neighborhood. The dwelling rises one story in height with the second story and attic half-story within the gambrel roof. Exterior-end chimneys project from both side elevations, piercing the overhanging eaves of the encompassing roof. Shed-roof dormers extend nearly the full width of the front and rear slopes of the roof, holding small paired double-hung sash. Additional nature light is provided by the single double-hung windows piercing the side elevations and upper gable ends. The front slope of the main roof extends to cover the inset porch that extends across the façade; the eastern end of the porch is enclosed with brick cladding and a bank of four double-hung windows. A similar example is located at 4600 2nd Street South (000-7818-0105). Dating from about 1947, this wood-frame house is clad in asbestos shingles. The gambrel roof has wide overhanging eaves, broken by the single brick chimney on the east side elevation. The shed roof dormers, running nearly the full width of the building, have wide double-hung windows with inoperable shutters as their only form of ornamentation.

One of the smallest examples of the Dutch Colonial Revival style is the house at 304 South Abingdon Street (000-7818-0211). The structure is concrete block faced in a brick veneer. It is just two bays square with a one-bay wide garage wing. Both the main block and garage wing are covered by dominating gambrel roofs, pierced by oversized front-gabled dormers. The dormers, complete with raking cornices and returns, are faced in siding with standard-sized windows; the windows appear undersized within the larger dormers. The side-entry opening has a stylized surround of fluted pilasters supporting a plain frieze.

Tudor Revival

The Tudor Revival style is loosely based on architectural characteristics of late Medieval English cottages and manor houses featuring Renaissance detailing. The first Tudor Revival-style dwellings appeared in the United States in the late nineteenth century and were designed by architects who closely copied English models. These dwellings featured stone or brick walls, steeply pitched parapets on cross-gabled roofs, elaborate facades of Gothic or Jacobean inspiration, tall narrow windows arranged in groups with multi-pane glazing, and large chimneys topped with decorative pots. From 1900 to 1920, the style began to appear on more modest suburban dwellings. These structures retained the steeply pitched roof, groups of narrow windows, and dominant chimneys, and began to exhibit half-timbering as a decorative detail. The style reached its height of popularity during the late 1920s and the 1930s, but continued to be fashionable in suburban neighborhoods nationwide until the middle part of the twentieth century. The rise in the style's popularity corresponded to developments in masonry veneering techniques, which allowed modest wood-frame or concrete-block structures to be faced in brick and stone, thus mimicking the brick and stone exteriors seen on the earlier high-style interpretations of the style. These dwellings demonstrate a wide variation of shapes, forms, and exterior decorations; however, the markers of the style are still apparent in the steeply pitched cross-gabled roofs, dominant chimneys, asymmetrical entry bays, and exterior decorations such as half-timbering, skintled bricks, and decorative stone work.

The Tudor Revival style is one of the more popular architectural styles in Arlington County for dwellings constructed in the 1930s and mid-1950s, particularly in the northern part of the county where the houses were being designed for middle and upper-middle class residents. The survey update identified high-style middle-class houses dating from 1936 to about 1955 in both Waycroft-Woodlawn and Barcroft. Because the development history of these two neighborhoods during the second quarter of the twentieth century is somewhat similar, the houses are alike in form, massing, scale, and detail. The most common element of the Tudor Revival style exhibited is the steeply pitched gable roof, which projects from the main side-gabled roof.

The form of the Tudor Revival-style houses borrowed from the Cape Cod, with its side-gabled roof sheltering a one-and-a-half-story rectangular structure. The examples were augmented by projecting entry bays, generally asymmetrically placed in the center or end bay of the three-bay structure. One of the more detailed examples is the house at 1414 North Buchanan Street (000-4229-0228), which was erected in 1936 by builder J.P. Farmer in the Forrest Park subdivision of Waycroft-Woodlawn. Enlarged in 1955 by a wing addition on the side elevation, the main block is three bays wide and two bays deep. The modest size of the house is balanced by the oversized front gable that projects from the western side of the roof on the primary elevation. This projecting gable is steeply pitched and finished with stucco and half-timbering set in an ornate pattern around triple casement windows. An inset dormer, also with a steeply pitched roof and half-timbering pierces the eastern side of the roof. The brick-veneered structure has stone cladding around the primary entry, triple casement windows—some with fixed transoms, an exterior-end chimney with corbeled cap and molded shoulder, and corbeled brick cornice.

The house at 4739 16th Street North (000-4229-0136) was constructed in 1936 with oversized front-gabled dormers, projecting entry bay with asymmetrically sloping roof, diamond-paned casement window, and semicircular-arched entry. Many of these same details are presented on the house at 401

South Taylor Street (000-7818-0259), which was built about 1940. Stone frames the segmentally arched entry and foundation at the corner of the projecting front-gabled bay. The modest brick veneer of the house at 1507 North George Mason Drive (000-4229-0154), which was erected in 1939, is augmented by randomly placed stones, which also serve as impostes and keystone over the segmentally arched entry within the asymmetrical projecting bay. False half-timbering is also found on the front gables at 1503 North Buchanan Street (000-4229-0312) and 4913 11th Street North (000-4229-0290), both constructed in 1936. Another of the more character-defining features of the style is the chimney rising from the primary elevation. This element was presented at 1264 North Buchanan Street (000-4229-0255) and 4655 4th Street South (000-7818-0142), completed in 1936 and 1938 respectively.

Modern Movement²

Although the Colonial Revival and its derivative styles were traditionally embraced by residents of Arlington County, by the mid-twentieth century, developers were experimenting with elements of the Modern Movement. The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) was a primary motivator in the application of what it described as “Modern” design, issuing a technical bulletin addressing modern design and how it should be evaluated in the rating of mortgage applications. Although this bulletin principally addressed the actual rating of single-family housing, it reveals the agency’s thinking on modern design generally.³

The FHA advised its staff to evaluate projects designed in modern styles on their success in achieving these goals, saying that it was important to distinguish between “stylistic labels which are purely surface treatment, and those which proceed from developments in plan or structure.” The FHA recognized the long-term implications of modernism, saying that, “in spite of many faddish features displayed by [modern design,] the movement is one of more than a transitory nature, and...the basic elements which characterize it will in all likelihood sooner or later become characteristic of a large body of our stock of housing.”⁴ The styles of the Modern Movement era rejected the decorative features of traditional architectural styles that evoked historical periods. Instead, with an aesthetic that relied heavily on massing, form, and materials, it celebrated new materials, new technologies, and a concern for creating simplified, functional, and efficient living spaces. Moreover, Modern Movement styles, like the European-inspired Art Deco and Streamline Moderne, embodied the “hypnotizing promise of more and more things tomorrow, advanced by America’s machine technologies and rising standard of living.”⁵ Modernism emphasized the utilitarian, deliberately seeking to reduce costs and encourage simpler living by providing a less expensive design that was technologically advanced. The architecture of the Modern Movement espoused a better tomorrow for the middle class that was difficult to ignore after the dark years of the Great Depression and World Wars.

In design, Modern Movement dwellings were influenced by the placement and size of window openings, varying of window types, placement of the primary entry opening, differing of cladding materials, and types of porch or eave supports. Ornamentation was by fashion, and necessity, limited if present at all. Opening surrounds were stripped, replaced by nondescript rowlock brick sills or wood sills. Lintels or arches were abandoned as window openings were placed randomly, often abutting the overhanging eaves of the low-lying roof. Casement and double-hung sash windows illuminate the same building, often within the same elevation. The ideals of a picture window that opened the interior spaces to the outdoors, like the true ranch house, were presented by the pairing of windows or use of wider sash framed by louvered or paneled shutters. The application of shutters, which are always inoperable and under- or oversized, also framed entry openings as an inexpensive means of providing the ornamentation traditionally promoted by surrounds with pilasters or engaged columns, or mimicking sidelights. The entry openings are also often placed asymmetrically off center, unceremoniously denoted by a stoop with metal balustrade. Support of porches, if they are present, is often metal filigree with thin spiral balusters. The overhanging eaves or pent roofs indicative of the Modern Movement are visually, but not physically, stabilized by brackets with exaggerated arches or diagonally placed supports of wood frame.

The single-family dwelling at 511 South Abingdon Street (000-7818-0173) in the Sixth Addition to Barcroft was constructed in 1954 by Robert O'Hara, who was responsible for much of the mid-century construction in this neighborhood. The one-story ranch house is concrete block veneered six-course, Flemish-bond brick, an added design expense not typical of Modern Movement housing. The long rectangular form is covered by a shallow-pitched gable roof with a slight overhang on the front and rear elevations. An oversized brick chimney with a plain cap protrudes from the side elevation of the building. The house presents the typical fenestration pattern of mid-century design, with the primary entry placed slightly off center, a larger picture window bringing the exterior into the living room, and smaller windows illuminating the bedrooms and baths. The entry lacks a molded surround, while the windows are finished with rowlock sills and undersized and inoperable shutters.

Traditional forms like the Cape Cod and minimal traditional continued to be constructed throughout Arlington County in the mid-twentieth century, often with Modern Movement elements. These included expansive picture windows, metal sash casements, using of varying exterior cladding materials, and entry openings that were not centrally placed or easily located, thus requiring study of the dwelling's design to find entry. The house at 1415 North George Mason Drive (000-4229-0203) has a form typical of the minimal traditional, a long rectangular main block augmented by a projecting bay on the end of the façade. The concrete-block structure is veneered in brick with thin coursed stone covering the façade of the main block. The single-leaf entry is recessed within the plane of the wall at the intersection of the main block and projecting bay. The wide picture window, abutting the narrow frieze trimming the roof, is framed by narrow double-hung sash of metal frame. The house at 5120 14th Street North (000-4229-0233) is very similar in form with a brick veneer and siding in the upper gable ends. The entry is hidden largely unseen, placed in the side elevation of the projecting bay. Its location is publicized simply by a flat-roofed porch with metal filigree posts.

THEME: DOMESTIC

RESOURCE TYPES: Single-Family Dwellings and Secondary Domestic Structures

The majority of primary resources identified during this update phase have a historic association with the Domestic theme. The resource types identified in the survey update area include single-family dwellings and associated outbuildings, such as garages and sheds. Like those domestic resources recorded during the comprehensive survey phases, intense development of domestic buildings in the survey update area began in the World War I to World War II period (1918-1945) and continued at a steady pace after World War II during the New Dominion period (1946-present). Although skewed by the target survey dates utilized for this survey update, development commenced in the 1930s and did not wane until the mid-1950s.

The comprehensive survey of Arlington County identified neighborhoods improved by subdividers, who sold the property without improvements to owners who engaged an architect to design their house, and neighborhoods established and improved by home builders, who built single-family dwellings similar in size, scale, and style that were sold individually to prospective homeowners. The development of this most current survey update reflects the latter type of builder, reflecting a construction trend identified by mass-produced housing that was identical upon completion. These mid-twentieth-century neighborhoods provided modern housing that reflected the most up-to-date principles of design, while respecting the traditional styles, and created a sense of unity between neighbors. The majority of the suburbs in Arlington County were planned by home builders and community builders with a long-time association in the development of the Washington metropolitan area. They “often sought expertise from several design professionals, including engineering, landscape architecture, and architecture.”⁶ The houses were marketed toward the middle-income family, returning World War II veterans, and very often provided Veterans Administration (VA) and/or FHA financing. The increase in housing costs, the great need for housing, and the “general conservative stance” of VA and FHA guidelines were all “major factors affecting the appearance of house form and subdivision design... [before and] after World War II.”⁷ As a result, many of the suburbs nationwide, including those in Arlington County, were “stylistically homogeneous neighborhoods or neighborhoods having deed restrictions or other regulations to guarantee architectural harmony.”⁸ This is illustrated in Waycroft-Woodlawn, Barcroft, and High View Park.

The single-family resources in the survey update areas are typically one to two stories in height and constructed on concrete-block foundations. The vast majority of the structures are concrete block with a brick veneer, often all-stretcher-bond and sometimes six-course Flemish bond. Upper gable ends are typically clad in a contrasting siding, which in many cases has been reclad in a synthetic siding. When comparing all domestic resource types identified, it was noted that the roofs are primarily side gable, and typically clad in asphalt shingles. Unlike the previous survey update phase, hipped roofs and cross-gabled roofs were noted frequently. The dormers recorded were predominately front gable if punctuating the slope over the façade, or shed if on the rear slope. They typically had little applied ornamentation, and were typically clad in vinyl replacement siding. The chimneys, all constructed of brick, are predominately exterior, projecting from side elevations, or because of the number of Tudor Revival-style and Modern Movement-era buildings identified in this survey phase, located on the facades. On average, the buildings in the survey area are three bays wide with a central or side-passage entry. The vast majority of the dwellings have one-bay-wide porches rather than full-width porches or porticoes. A notable number of buildings lacked a porch or, in some cases, even an entry surround. Many of the buildings have side porches, a number of which have been enclosed to provide additional living space. These one-story wings commonly have a shed roof and are set on a solid masonry foundation. Typically, the houses interpreting the minimal traditional form have projecting bays on the rear elevations; porches have been added in the elbow created between the main block and ell. Although the double-hung window, both single and paired, was prominent throughout the survey area, casement and fixed picture windows were documented on Modern Movement buildings. The majority of the window openings do not retain their original wood sashes. Window surrounds were minimal and inoperable shutters—undersized and oversized—were popular. Those buildings veneered in brick have rowlock brick sills.

It was noted during the comprehensive survey that the majority of suburban domestic buildings have associated outbuildings. Because most suburbs throughout the nation that developed after 1900 were predicated on the use of automobiles, garages were an essential feature. Modest residential buildings, often those constructed by home builders, included a freestanding garage. A total of 155 freestanding garages and 6 carports were recorded, the majority contemporaneous to the main dwelling. Many of the dwellings dating from the mid-twentieth century incorporate garages or carports into the main block, rather than providing a separate structure. Yet, this trend was not overwhelmingly noted in the survey update areas. Despite developing and growing during the advent of the automobile, the neighborhoods included in the survey update have a minimal number of freestanding and attached garages. Unlike the garages, the sheds in the survey area appear to be of a prefabricated nature, dating primarily from the late twentieth or early twenty-first centuries. One hundred eighty-eight prefabricated sheds were noted, along with several pergolas, a greenhouse, gazebo, and two barbeques.

World War I to World War II Period (1918-1945)

Between 1918 and 1945, the first of two major development phases began in Arlington County. However, the platting of the suburban neighborhoods and construction of the housing by builders in the survey update areas did not commence until the 1930s and early 1940s and continued at a steady rate after World War II. Of the 711 domestic resources identified in the survey update, 333 dwellings were constructed during this period. Construction commenced in the mid-1920s with 245 houses constructed by 1939. The growing federal presence in the nation's capital greatly affected construction as single-family dwellings were rapidly built through the county; 88 new houses were constructed in the survey update areas in the two years prior to America's official participation in World War II. New construction waned, ceasing during 1943 and 1944, when shortages in materials and manpower affected the building industry.

Typically, the domestic buildings of this period are one to two stories in height, which is typical of those documented during the comprehensive surveys. The plan of the dwellings usually is central passage and one room deep with a one-story porch (typically now enclosed) on the side or rear elevations. Rooflines are overwhelmingly side gable and clad in asphalt shingles. Continuing the architectural styles and plans of the early twentieth century, the domestic buildings from the early part of the World War I to World War II period are primarily Cape Cod buildings designed in the Colonial Revival style. The Bungalow/Craftsman form was trendy in the early part of the period, giving way to variations on the minimal traditional and ultimately the ranch house. The abundance of interpretations of the bungalow, Cape Cod, and minimal traditional forms in the survey areas attests to the tremendous need for modest suburban housing in the 1930s and early 1940s, and the adaptability of these popular housing forms.

The bungalow, a difficult form to define, is typically a small one-story or one-and-a-half-story house, usually having a low profile, wide overhanging eaves, front and/or side porches, and often wood-frame construction. The bungalow was not overwhelmingly popular in the survey update area, yet examples do exist; because of the survey date requirements most of the bungalows in the survey areas had been previously recorded.

One of the best illustrations of the bungalow form is the house located at 4411 4th Street South (000-7818-0227) in Barcroft. The building was erected ca. 1935 on a solid concrete foundation. It is a wood frame structure re clad in wavy asbestos cement shingles. The dwelling is capped by a side-gabled roof covered in standing seam metal, completed with raking wood boards and overhanging eaves. A single, centrally placed dormer is located at the front slope of the roof. The undersized dormer has a shed and paired six-light casement windows of wood frame. Typical of a bungalow, the primary entry is placed slightly off center, flanked on either side by double-hung windows with wide square-edged surrounds. The full-width front porch, inset under the extending eaves of the main roof, has a concrete-block foundation and Tuscan columns with square balusters.

The Cape Cod was one of the most popular forms of the early and mid-twentieth century in Arlington County. Inspired by its colonial predecessor, the twentieth-century form is a one- to one-and-a-half-story dwelling characterized by a side gable roof over a rectangular structure that is three- to five-bays wide. The Cape Cod typically has a central entry framed by double-hung windows. Examples dating from the Modern Movement often have picture windows or grouped sash. Unlike the colonial version, the Cape Cods of Arlington often are augmented by dormers.

The three-bay-wide Cape Cod form proved a popular domestic form in the survey areas, particularly in Barcroft. Overwhelmingly, the side-gabled roof was pierced by front gable dormers with double-hung sash. Exterior-end chimneys rise from the side elevations. The house at 4730 16th Road North (000-4229-0149) was constructed in 1938 on a solid concrete foundation with a wood-frame structure. The exterior is clad in the original wavy asbestos cement siding, a common material in the pre-World War II years. The central entry is neatly framed by a stylized Colonial Revival surround with fluted Tuscan pilasters and molded frieze that abuts the cornice of the roof. The notably wide surround is framed on either side by wide double-hung windows, each holding an 8/8 sash with square-edged surrounds and undersized louvered shutters. The house at 4900 16th Road North (000-4229-0129) is similarly finished but with paired double-hung windows piercing the façade rather than oversized single windows.

Popular in the mid-1930s through to 1950, the minimal traditional form is a direct result of the economic depression of the 1930s. It is a compromise form that reflects the traditional eclectic houses but lacks the decorative detailing that proved cost prohibitive. Indicative of the minimal traditional is a projecting bay on the façade, giving the building an L-shaped form. One variation of the minimal traditional form is generated by a front porch within the elbow of the projecting bay and main block. This was noted at 4714 16th Road North (000-4229-0145), which has an inset porch under the extending eaves of the main roof. The steeply pitched gable roof of the projecting bay is reflective of the Tudor Revival style, popular when this house was constructed in 1936 in Waycroft-Woodlawn. The stylistic detailing however is more commonly associated with the Colonial Revival style, albeit it minimally expressed. The inset porch has square balusters and posts with v-shaped capitals extending up to form the frieze. The façade has paired double-hung windows on the first story and single double-hung sash in the upper gable end of the projecting bay. A corbeled brick chimney rises from the east side elevation. A similar example, constructed entirely of wood frame clad in asbestos cement shingles, is located at 4650 5th Street South (000-7818-0168). This house does not have an inset porch, but rather a shed-roofed porch with one square supporting post.

The two-story rectangular box-like form of the Colonial Revival style that dominates much of the county was overwhelmingly prevalent. The rectangular plan stands two to two-and-a-half stories in height under a side-gabled roof. The concrete-block structures are faced in bricks, which either rises to veneer the upper gable end or gives way to siding at the cornice line. The ornamentation was minimal consisting primarily of raking boards, jack-arched brick lintels, undersized/inoperable shutters, and/or rowlock brick sills. Sometimes stretcher bricks are used to create a string course on the façade. The roofs of the entry porches varied, including front gables or hipped roofs with squared posts. More often than not, the primary entries lacked a porch but were ornamented with Colonial Revival-style surrounds replete with Tuscan posts or columns, pilasters, wide frieze, and molded cornice. Symmetrical fenestration was foremost with these buildings, having the side and central entry flanked by two window openings on the first story and three equally spaced window openings on the second story of the façade. Sometimes, for variation, the form was turned so the front-gabled end faced the street, like at 122 South Pershing Drive (000-7818-0060).

Nestled amongst the many thousands of mid-twentieth-century Colonial Revival-style houses for which Arlington County is known is a relatively rare and infrequently acknowledged house form—the apartment bungalow. This form is found in defined neighborhoods rather than county-wide, reflecting the works of select builders and the overall growth pattern of Arlington County. The form, although providing everything the prospective resident would need, was only constructed in 1938 and 1939. The four-room structure was the quintessential small house, providing approximately 900 square feet in a 30-foot by 30-foot plan. The form adheres strictly to the principles prescribed by the FHA for small houses and the ideals of Modern Movement architecture, particular in its use of modern materials such as concrete blocks and steel framed windows. The apartment bungalow, unlike the vast majority of contemporaneous housing being constructed in the county, such as the Cape Cod and Minimal Traditional forms, provided compact Modern Movement alternatives to the traditional forms of the mid-twentieth century. Each house is constructed of concrete blocks, which are predominately left exposed or veneered in formed stone or brick. Fenestration includes uniquely wrapping or corner steel casement windows. The distinct pyramidal roof of the apartment bungalow is pierced by a short interior chimney at the center. Yet, despite the tremendous need for housing, the apartment bungalow, further hampered by pre-war restrictions, was not particularly successful as Arlingtonians' lacked enthusiasm for modern materials and designs, preferring the conventional forms and materials of the Colonial Revival-styled house.

Two examples of the apartment bungalow were recorded during the Phase III survey. Now located in High View Park, the houses were constructed in the late 1930s in the Ballston-Virginia Square neighborhood but moved in 1963 when Interstate 66 was built. The house at 1803 North Cameron Street (000-4766) presents the typical form of the apartment bungalow, being square in form with a pyramidal hipped roof crowned by an interior brick chimney. The central entry is sheltered by a hipped porch, now with wrought-iron posts. The wrapping windows, currently holding vinyl sash, originally had Fenestra Steel casements. Although formed stone was a cladding option available for an additional $100, the concrete-block structure on North Cameron Street was veneered in formed stone after its relocation to High View Park.

The New Dominion Period (1946-present)

The most popular and traditional styles and forms, especially for domestic architecture, were adapted for the post-war years. The Cape Cod, two-story box-like structure, and Colonial Revival styles dominated the landscape of Arlington County in the mid-twentieth century. However, the Modern Movement, which had begun to take hold in the years just prior to World War II, eventually dictated the house forms, fenestration patterns, materials, and ornamentation. New buildings were overwhelmingly constructed of concrete blocks veneered in brick, with siding used to accent upper gable ends. This reduced construction costs, making a single-family house affordable to middle-class residents.

Within the survey areas, the ranch house form was most popular during this period. The defining characteristics of a ranch house were established in the western United States, with Sunset Magazine taking the lead. The publicity of the “modern ranch house and its predecessors in the magazine prior to the Second World War,” created a nationwide interest. The attraction was based on three simple concepts—“livability, flexibility and an unpretentious character.”⁹ Architectural Historian David Bricker explained:

Coupled with the importance of using climate as an element of design, these concepts were applied to conditions of the site and orientation of the house. Outdoor living areas extending beyond the house on the same level were also emphasized, so that interior space merged with the exterior, separated merely by large areas of glass and sliding glass doors. Other typical characteristics included a linear arrangement of rooms, elevations composed asymmetrically, and a telescopic effect of low wings spreading out from the rectangular core of the plan. And additions and alterations to a ranch house were foreseeable since they were part of its architectural tradition.¹⁰

The building industry claimed the ranch house exuded “friendliness, simplicity, informality, and gaiety...” Most significantly, as Sunset Magazine exclaimed, “the house was very expandable,” with rooms spilling out “onto the veranda and, if necessary, into the patio, without losing connection with the house.”¹¹ The marriage of indoor and outdoor living spaces as offered by the ranch house, even when placed on a small suburban lot like those in Arlington County, enlarged—however falsely—the small family home. Under the heading, “The Expansible House—The House That Grows With The Family,” the FHA acknowledged the ranch house had become a recognized architectural form essentially because it was “freely extensible,” offering many the dream houses they envisioned building/owning.¹² By the 1950s, the ranch house had become the predominant residential choice nationwide; nine out of every ten new houses was labeled a ranch house (or the equally descriptive “rambler”).¹³

In Arlington County, the tremendous need for housing and the continued success of the construction industry resulted in very modest interpretations of the western ranch house. Typically, the form was rectangular, just slightly beyond square. It stands one story in height with a very shallow side-gabled roof, which is sometimes augmented by a front gable. The roof has wide overhanging eaves of the façade and rear elevation, thereby creating a sense of sheltered outdoor living space. Chimneys are typically placed on the side elevation or pierce the rear slope of the roof. The survey update recorded ranch houses and variations of them listed in the DHR-DSS as “other” throughout the survey areas, but primarily in Barcroft, which continued to develop in the mid-twentieth century. The majority of the examples noted were erected in the 1950s.

The common ranch house form was identified throughout the survey areas, often with variations to present individuality. The 1952 ranch house at 4819 14th Street North (000-4229-0227) is nearly identical to the one at South Abingdon Street, save it has a front-gabled pediment rising from the roof over the primary entry and picture window. The house at 5123 14th Street North (000-4229-0208) was constructed in 1953 with a similar front gable set over the single bedroom window. This Phase III Survey Update was one of the first to record a number of ranch houses with integrated carports, a feature not that common to Arlington County. The house at 4306 8th Street South (000-7818-0413) was completed in 1958 with all of the typical elements of a mid-century ranch house, including the off-center entry recessed within the plane of the wall, picture window composed of three double-hung sashes, and smaller bedroom windows. The shallow-pitched side gable roof extends beyond the main block of the house and past the exterior-end brick chimney to form a carport. The garage area is open on three sides with square wood posts supporting it. Another notable example is the house at 4933 18th Street North (000-4777), which was constructed by J. Vernon Smith in 1957 as speculative development in High View Park. The house is concrete block veneered primarily in all-stretcher-bond brick. Paired double-hung windows extend from the cornice line almost to the foundation to illuminate the living areas, while the private bedroom spaces have half-sized double-hung windows. These smaller paired windows are set directly at the cornice within a weatherboard siding. The side-gabled roof is exceptionally shallow with deep overhanging eaves on the façade and rear. The roof extends well beyond the main block to form the carport. It projects past the house at the façade, almost creating a shed roof supported by angled posts set on low stone-clad walls that frame the walk to the main entry.

The ranch house form, much like the Cape Cod form, was often turned so that its narrower front-gabled elevation faced the street. This allowed for variety and narrower lot sizes. The houses at 4801 8th Road South (000-7818-0330) and 4819 8th Road South (000-7818-0332), constructed in 1955 and 1956 respectively by builder R. Spreier. Although the fenestration common to the ranch house was retained on the longer elevations, the window and door openings on the façade were often the design of the individual builder. Spreier placed the oversized exterior-end chimney on the façade, rising through the wide overhanging eaves of the shallow pitched roof. His designs included either single-leaf doors with larger picture windows or double-leaf entry doors with smaller casement windows. Extending from the side slope of the roof was a shed roof supported by posts or brick walls to shelter the carport.

More typically, however, the rectangular ranch house was augmented by a projecting bay that houses additional living space like the minimal traditional form or included a garage. Again, the use of stylistic ornamentation, albeit minimally, was utilized. The house at 5123 15th Street North (000-4229-0161) was built in 1950 with a traditional ranch house form pierced by wide picture windows. A long bay projects from the eastern side of the façade, housing the one-car garage. The primary entry is located within a project vestibule with a flat roof and squared sides. The boxed vestibule holds a single-leaf door and small window set just below the cornice.

Like the pre-war apartment bungalow, the California-type house espoused the principles prescribed by the FHA for small houses and the ideals of Modern Movement architecture, providing efficiency of living and economically built housing in the burgeoning suburbs of Washington, D.C. The California-type house, constructed after World War II from 1946 to 1952, recalled many of the features of the popular ranch house. It presented a one-story rectangular plan of 1,141 square feet with combined living and dining areas, kitchen, and two bedrooms. Similar in materials, form, fenestration, and massing to the apartment bungalow, the California-type house also proved not to be successful with Arlington County residents. The house at 4604 8th Road South (000-7818-0402) is an example of the California-type house, dating from 1949. Similar to the apartment bungalow in plan, although larger, the house is constructed of concrete blocks with a dominating hipped roof. The brick chimney rises from the façade, protruding from the overhanging eaves of the roof. The central entry is framed by a small window of glass blocks. The living space is marked by a nearly full-height picture window, while the private bedroom area has smaller single and paired openings.

Post-war variations of the apartment bungalow and California-type house forms were noted in Waycroft-Woodlawn in 16th Street North. The houses at 5130 and 5138 16th Street North (000-4229-0169/0171) are square in plan with a concrete-block structure covered in a painted brick veneer. The pyramidal roofs are edged by scalloped molding, a treatment that adorns the flat roof of the garage wing. Fenestration consists of a single entry set in the side bay and a wide picture window flanked by double-hung sash stretching across the majority of the façade. Undersized shutters frame the window openings. Dominance of the garage at the time the buildings were constructed in 1951 required the one-car garage to project at the front of the property from the corner of the dwelling.

As interior spaces changed to provide a stronger division between the public living and dining areas and the more private bedroom spaces, the split-level house was born. This distinct housing form of the mid- to late twentieth century is easily identified by its one-story entry wing and two-story main block. Variety is gained by utilizing either a side gable or front gable roof, or sometime presenting both. Public living areas are made to seem larger by uniting the indoor space with the open outdoors through expansive picture windows or paired double-hung sash. The more private spaces, as presented by the ranch house, have smaller single windows. The partially exposed basement level in the main block, often providing recreation rooms where louder activities could be confined, had smaller double-hung windows.

The tremendous need for house, which was reflected in all of the survey phases, resulted in the construction of many apartment buildings and complexes, especially between 1935 and 1954 when the FHA was regulating multi-family housing standards. Unlike most survey phases, particularly those conducted in the southern and central parts of Arlington County, this most recent survey effort recorded only one multi-family building. The individual low-rise apartment building at 4940-4946 19th Street North (000-4780) was constructed in 1954 in High View Park. Indicative of the Modern Movement, the brick-veneered structure has a flat roof, lacking a cornice and frieze. The building, unlike many from the mid-century, is symmetrically fenestrated with single double-hung windows and paired sliding windows that presumably were originally casements. Four single-leaf entry openings mark the longer front and rear elevations. A continuous shed roof with dividing square posts support the roof.

Domestic Outbuildings

Typically, domestic resources constructed in Arlington County had associated outbuildings, particularly garages and sheds. These structures commonly built of wood frame or brick, depending on the construction material of the main dwelling and the period during which it was erected. The majority of the outbuildings documented in comprehensive survey phases were constructed during both the World War I to World War II period and the New Dominion period. This proved to be true for those identified in the most current survey update.

One hundred fifty-five freestanding garages and six carports were recorded. Of these, 82 were constructed in the years prior to World War II, with an additional 45 dating from 1941 to 1962. The number of other outbuildings, such as sheds, was notably high, as is typical for mid-twentieth-century suburban properties. Of the 182 prefabricated sheds recorded, only six are deemed historic because of their estimated period of construction. A few pergolas and a greenhouse, two barbeque, and a gazebo were also noted.

An excellent example of an historic garage was documented at 700 South Wakefield Street (000-4229-0388) in Waycroft-Woodlawn. Constructed in 1959 on a solid concrete slab foundation, this concrete-block structure is dressed with six-course, Flemish-bond brick. The garage, completed just nine years after the main dwelling, is capped by a front-gabled roof of asphalt shingles and has a wood vent in its upper gable end. It is fenestrated with a roll-up metal garage door and with paired, three-light metal casement windows set on rowlock brick sills. A similar garage is located at 4511 4th Street South (000-7818-0224). Constructed in 1950, this one-story, one-bay garage reflects the design of the main dwelling, which was completed in 1949. Set on a solid foundation, the concrete-block structure is stuccoed, and capped with a hipped roof clad in asphalt shingles. The façade is marked by metal roll-up door.

THEME: COMMERCE/TRADE

RESOURCE TYPE: Commercial Building

With improvements in transportation, Arlington County was opened to development, particularly commercial enterprises that flanked the major thoroughfares, such as Lee Highway and Columbia Pike. Purpose-built commercial buildings recorded during the numerous surveys of Arlington County have lined major transportation corridors. These modern commercial enclaves or developments provide services to the neighborhood and passing automobile traffic, often providing off-street parking. Further, it was common practice for developers to provide commercial shopping centers within the neighborhoods they were establishing as a tool to attract residents. In the Barcroft neighborhood, most of the commercial buildings lie to the south of the residential lots and were primarily constructed during the second half of the twentieth century. Fronting along Columbia Pike, the commercial strip includes a supermarket, gas stations, and numerous other retail establishments that service the Barcroft community and the automobile traffic passing to the south of the neighborhood.

The single example of a commercial building identified in this survey update is located at 4801-4821 Columbia Pike (000-7818-0431). The Barcroft Shopping Center was constructed in 1949 by W. Von Herbulis. The one-story, multi-store commercial building has held a variety of stores and restaurants since its opening. Current occupants include several restaurants and a laundromat. The building sits on a concrete-and-steel slab, and has a steel frame structure system. The concrete-block walls are clad in stucco, and the building is topped by a built-up, flat roof behind a parapet wall. Fenestration is typically large float-glass windows in metal frames. Entrances for the retail spaces are typically glass-and-metal doors topped by a glass transom. The commercial building is organized into two large end-pavilion stores, connected to paired stores in three central pavilions by one-store hyphens. The end-pavilion stores are each crowned by a flat parapet over a signage awning. The first story is comprised of a central storefront entrance flanked by windows to the east and west. The entrance is comprised of a glass-and-metal door surrounded by very narrow sidelights and a large transom, framed by concrete piers supporting a concrete lintel.

THEME: EDUCATION

RESOURCE TYPE: School

As similarly noted in previous survey phases, few properties associated with education have been identified countywide. Although numerous education-related facilities were located within the survey boundaries, the majority of these resources have not yet reached the fifty-year age requirement and, therefore, were not included in the reconnaissance survey. Moreover, a substantial number of those schools that have reached the fifty-year age requirement have been substantially altered and, therefore, do not retain sufficient integrity to warrant inclusion in the surveys. The Phase III Survey Update effort recorded one historic school—Woodlawn School (000-4229-0313).

The Woodlawn School at 4715 15th Street North in Waycroft-Woodlawn was constructed in 1940 for the Arlington County School Board as an elementary school for this neighborhood. The building experienced several additions in its first decades to serve this purpose, including a first addition in 1947 and a second addition in 1962; the 15th Street North address reflects the original construction period although the primary façade now fronts 16th Street North. The building served as an elementary school through the 1960s, and closed for a brief period in 1971. In 1972, the building reopened as a science and mathematics magnet school for Arlington County high school students. The magnet school closed in 1978, and building was donated by Arlington County for use by the Hospice of Northern Virginia. In October 1981, the hospice program opened an inpatient facility within the building, and the structure was modernized for this use. The hospice program was renamed the Roy and Margaret Halquist Memorial Hospice Center in 1998.

The original one-story building that was constructed in 1940 for the Woodlawn School has experienced several additions since that time, both to serve its use as a growing school through the 1970s, and as a hospice center since 1981. The original building remains visible and distinct at 16th Street North, with additions extending from its south elevation at 15th Street North. The original one-story structure is composed of three blocks: a square block at the center is capped by a hipped roof, and is flanked by a wing to each side. The wings are rounded at their ends, and are capped by half-hipped roofs. The roofline is covered in slate shingles. The concrete building is dressed throughout with three-course, Flemish-bond brick. The central square block is set apart by brick quoins at its cornice and with dentil wood molding at its cornice. The façade of the center block holds the double-leaf main entry to the building, marked by a paneled metal door with lights. The entry is set within a prominent Colonial Revival-style wood surround composed of pilasters, dentil molding, and a large, broken pediment with an ornamental urn at the center. The entry is flanked to each side by a narrow paired double-hung windows completed with splayed brick arches with concrete keystones.

As noted, the original school building has experienced several additions since its construction in 1940 to serve its functions. The first addition was constructed in 1947 according to Arlington County building permits and a newspaper article from the period titled “Contract Let for Arlington School Work,” published by the Washington Post on June 27, 1947. The article notes that the addition would include space for three classrooms, a multipurpose room and alterations to the school’s heating plant. This addition is the one-story, rectangular structure that extends from the rear elevation of the school building. The addition is capped by a flat roof, and is veneered with stretcher-bond brick. According to Arlington County building permits, the school was also remodeled and improved in 1954. In 1962, a second addition was added to the rear elevation of the rectangular addition. The two-story structure is set beneath a shallow, side-gabled roof of asphalt shingles, and has a one-story “skirt” structure that surrounds its south and east elevations. The brick-clad addition reflects the influence of the Modern Movement, and features single-light, clerestory wood windows.

THEME: HEALTH CARE/MEDICINE

RESOURCE TYPE: Office/Office Building

The single example of an office building identified in the survey update is located at 939 South Wakefield Street (000-7818-0420). According to an announcement in the Washington Post, the Barcroft Medical Building was designed by architect Richard L. Parli and was constructed by W.A. Sherman & Son. As designed, the building was planned for use by a variety of medical specialties.¹⁴ The office continues to serve its original function today. The two-story, rectangular-plan office building was influenced by the Modern Movement. The concrete block building is clad in stretcher-bond, Roman-brick veneer at the first story and in painted vertical-board siding at the second story. The office building is capped by an asymmetrical, built-up, butterfly roof. The first story of the façade is marked by large white metal letters that read “Barcroft Medical Building.” Centrally located at the façade is the primary entrance, composed of a glass-and-metal door with a glazed transom set in an aluminum surround. Other fenestration at the first story includes paired floor-to-ceiling fixed windows with transoms set in aluminum surrounds. The second story has a ribbon of five alternating glazed and opaque panels and a ribbon of three floor-to-ceiling windows set in aluminum surrounds.

THEME: RELIGION

RESOURCE TYPE: Church/Chapel

Two church buildings were identified for the Update Phase III survey. These properties were constructed specifically to meet the demands of the residential communities of Barcroft and High View Park.

Our Savior Lutheran Church at 825 South Taylor Street (000-7818-0313) in the Barcroft neighborhood was designed by architect E.E. Lyons and constructed by K.D. Hamalter in 1943. The first service for the church had taken place in the Arlington Theater on October 26, 1941, with forty-five adults and children present. With the growth of the congregation, the new church building at 825 Taylor Street was commissioned. The building was dedicated in August 1943.¹⁵ The modest, single-story, cross-plan church was influenced by the Colonial Revival style. The rectangular main block is capped by a front-gabled roof of asphalt shingles. The main block is intercepted by a side-gabled transept set toward the eastern end of the building. The building was constructed of concrete blocks faced with seven-course, American-bond brick. The roofline is simply embellished with a molded cornice and eave returns. A two-tier wood steeple crowns the roof. The bottom tier of the steeple is clad in painted wood shingles and the upper tier is screened with wood louvers. It is topped by a gilded cross-shaped finial. The primary entrance to the church is located in the central bay of the three-bay façade. The entrance is marked by a double-leaf door of paneled wood, surmounted by a multi-light transom. A one-story Colonial Revival-style porch shelters the entry. The porch has a front-gabled, pediment porch roof, supported by two square Tuscan columns and two engaged pilasters.

Historically, the church building at 1845 North Columbus Street (000-4771) was home to the Highview Park Holiness Church congregation, as recorded on Sanborn maps from 1936 and 1959.

¹⁵ "2 Arlington Churches Plan 10th Anniversary Celebrations," Washington Post, 20 October 1951, 6.

Today, the church building is owned by the Jesus is Lord Church. The church was constructed pre-1936. This area of Arlington County was first recorded by Sanborn maps in 1936, and the church building was documented at this location at that time. Building permits first record alterations to the building in 1946, but do not note a construction date. The modest church building reflects the influence of the Colonial Revival style. The one-story building is composed of an original one-story front-gabled rectangular main block, augmented with a small two-story square tower at its southeast corner. The one-story masonry building is clad in multi-hued stretcher-bond brick throughout, and its cross-gable roofline is covered in asphalt shingles. The roofline is completed with overhanging eaves and a plain wood cornice with raking wood boards and returns. The original façade (south elevation) of the main block, beyond the bell tower and covered by a front-gabled roof, is marked by two elongated rectangular openings, now enclosed with wood paneling, that are diagonally placed at the center of the elevation. A fixed oval wood window is located at the upper gable end. The bell tower projecting at the southeast corner of the main block is capped by a pyramidal roof with a spire. A large elongated rectangular recessed opening at its façade has been covered with plywood. A single-leaf paneled wood door marks its east (side) elevation and is accessed by a set of concrete steps.

The church building has experienced several changes since the mid-twentieth century. A large, one-story, six-bay side-gabled rectangular addition extends from the side elevation of the original main block. A one-story projecting bay has been added at the center of the main block's side elevation. The bell tower and the additions have the same material treatment as the main block. Arlington County building permits note that a one-story addition was made to the church building in 1969 and in 1981 but do not provide further details. Sanborn maps show that a one-story wood-frame parsonage was historically attached to the northeast corner of the church. The parsonage burned in 1951 according to newspaper articles from the period, but was rebuilt with a larger footprint.¹⁶ The large side-gabled addition at the east elevation of the main block currently holds the main entry to the church building. This addition is six bays across at the south elevation, five bays deep at its east elevation, and five bays across at its north elevation. All window openings on the addition hold single-light wood casement windows.

THEME: SOCIAL

RESOURCE TYPE: Clubhouse

The number of properties recorded during the many phases of survey in Arlington County for their association with the Social Theme has been limited to meeting halls and community centers. Although a number of residential subdivisions in the 1930s and 1940s set aside property specifically for such resources, in other cases formerly residential buildings were converted for the purpose. One such building is the clubhouse at 700 South Buchanan Street (000-7818-0320). Originally a single-family dwelling, the Women's Club of Arlington purchased the building in 1957 and converted it into their clubhouse. The building was constructed ca. 1950, and is recorded on the Sanborn Fire Insurance Company map of Arlington County from 1959 in its present form. The single-story, L-plan clubhouse reflects the influence of the Colonial Revival style and the Modern Movement. The concrete block building is dressed throughout with six-course, Flemish-bond brick and is capped by a cross-gabled roof covered in asphalt shingles. Fenestration throughout the building typically consists of 6/6 or 12/12 double-hung wood-sash windows. The façade holds the primary entrance to the clubhouse, marked by a double-leaf paneled wood door. The entry is sheltered beneath a one-story, one-bay porch supported by metal filigree posts.

RESEARCH DESIGN

Objectives

The goal of this third survey update phase was to revisit areas previously documented and reassess the target survey dates. This allowed for a more thorough survey and understanding of each resource's contribution to the county's heritage. The project was intended to: 1) synthesize and complete documentation of previously identified neighborhoods into a computerized database format; 2) collect additional information and survey previously unidentified or unevaluated historic properties and potential historic districts; and 3) heighten public awareness about historic resources in Arlington County to encourage citizen appreciation of their history.

Scope of Work

The project was organized into basic tasks:

- 1) The survey update encompassed the on-site study and documentation to the reconnaissance level of 715 historic resources in Waycroft-Woodlawn, Barcroft, and High View Park. All resources constructed in or before 1959 were recorded as part of this comprehensive survey phase; and
- 2) The identification of potential historic districts and individual properties eligible for listing in the Virginia Landmarks Register and the National Register of Historic Places.

Methodology

Approach

EHT Tracerics approached this project as a coordinated effort of experienced professional architectural historians working with the Arlington County Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development and the Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) in an effort to produce a cost-effective survey that would meet VDHR's high standards, as well as provide necessary information to Arlington County.

This was accomplished by working closely with Arlington County and its representatives to identify important architectural resources; by taking full advantage of the Data Sharing System (DSS) database to document and analyze historic properties; by understanding the history and geography to ensure that selected cultural resources accurately illustrate the county's historic context through the best-preserved and least-altered examples as subsumed under VDHR's eighteen historic context themes; by utilizing years of sound survey experience to guarantee an efficient effort; by employing a management methodology that is designed to result in an on-time performance; and by maximizing the potential of an experienced staff.

To achieve the desired products, EHT Tracerics organized a team with the credentials, skills, and successful experience to do the work. The team was composed of six members: a Project Director/Senior Architectural Historian and five Architectural Historian/Surveyors. The Project Director/Senior Architectural Historian managed the administration of the survey project, directed the tasks, and was responsible for preparing the Final Survey Report. She also functioned as the primary architectural historian, working with the team to evaluate the resources based on the historic context prepared in Phase I. Additionally, the Senior Architectural Historian was responsible for assessing potential landmarks and historic districts. The Architectural Historian/Surveyors conducted the on-site surveys—synthesizing, consolidating, undertaking data entry, locating the properties and resources, and conducting research on each property or neighborhood as appropriate. They worked together in the field, surveying and documenting resources that met the survey criteria.

Basic to the methodology was the determination of criteria for selecting properties to be surveyed using VDHR standards, historic themes, and requirements. This was a team effort that allowed for on-site decision making. A system was established to select properties for survey by synthesizing the VDHR standards, the eighteen VDHR historic context themes, the basic historic context outline, and VDHR contractual and archival requirements. Next, a plan was developed for identifying and surveying historic resources at the reconnaissance level.

The recordation of the properties to VDHR standards ensured the successful completion of the contract. Implementing the Survey Design, EHT Tracerics surveyed 715 resources to a reconnaissance level. Each reconnaissance-level survey form recorded a single property, including its primary and secondary resources. The completed form documented a primary resource with a detailed physical description as well as a brief description of any secondary resources on the property. It also included a brief evaluation of the property as an entity, placing it in a local historical and architectural context. Labeled, black-and-white photographs that document the resources accompanied all forms. The photographic documentation included a range of one to four views, with an average of two to three views of the primary resource and a minimum of one photograph per historic secondary resource or group of secondary resources if located close together. The photographs sufficiently illustrate the architectural character of the primary resource. A simple site plan sketch of the property indicating the relationship between primary and secondary resources was completed for each surveyed property. The site plans were prepared neatly in pencil on graph paper. The site plan sketch included the main road and any significant natural features. Copies of the relevant sections of USGS Quadrangle maps and county base maps were submitted with each group of five forms as required by VDHR and for each property as required by Arlington County.

EHT Tracerics utilized building permit cards that indicate the exact date of construction and subsequent alterations for resources built between 1936 and 1959. The permit cards were provided by the Historic Preservation Program in the Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development.

Work Plan

Implementation of the proposed work was based on an incremental process as outlined in the following seven task descriptions.

TASK 1:	Project Organization and Management
TASK 2:	Survey Design
TASK 3:	Survey
TASK 4:	DSS
TASK 5:	Evaluation of Properties
TASK 6:	Architectural Survey Report
TASK 7:	Project Completion

TASK 1: PROJECT ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

Project organization consisted of the establishment of a work schedule, coordination of the team members and the county staff, establishment of work assignments, arrangement for the necessary materials to undertake the work tasks, and maintenance of the project schedule.

The project director, largely responsible for organization and management, functioned as liaison between Arlington County, VDHR, and the project team. Activities included regular monitoring of the project's progress, preparation of the progress reports, problem solving in conjunction with VDHR and project staff, and attendance at required progress meetings with the county and VDHR representatives.

The project was managed through a system of task-oriented hierarchy. Incremental monitoring was combined with milestone review indicated as "results" for each task listed in the work plan.

TASK 2: SURVEY DESIGN

Prior to beginning fieldwork, all existing materials relevant to Arlington County contained within the VDHR archives were reviewed. Materials contained within the county's collection at the Historical Society, the Library of Congress, the Virginia Room at the Arlington County Library, and archives at other repositories in the county, as well as state and federal archives, were reviewed.

Arlington County planning staff was consulted regarding any newly proposed development projects that may affect the future of the survey area's historic resources. Documents, including the local comprehensive plan, Virginia Department of Transportation Six-Year Plan, and public utility plans, were reviewed.

In preparation for fieldwork, the reviewed materials, building permit cards, maps, and previous survey route were studied to determine the best approach for covering as much of the survey area as possible. As in all phases, properties were selected based on a survey criteria established by Arlington County and VDHR. This information was discussed and the potential course of action prepared for the county staff's review and approval. The survey design was revised and updated as necessary during the course of the on-site and archival efforts.

TASK 3: SURVEY

Upon completion of a survey schedule, the surveyors began the on-site survey work, following assigned routes. All work followed VDHR standards and properties selected during the on-site survey met the survey criteria. Selected properties were documented to the reconnaissance level as appropriate, including site plans and photographs of the exterior. Digital images were taken as appropriate throughout to aid in the survey effort (these images will not be submitted as part of the final product). The 3-1/2" x 5" or 4" x 6" black-and-white photographs were processed and labeled in pencil. Negative lists and negatives were also labeled to VDHR standards.

All survey efforts were conducted from the public right-of-way.

Concurrent with the on-site survey, archival sources were researched at the local, state, and federal levels, including primary and secondary sources. The bibliography developed in Phase I of the comprehensive survey, and augmented in the subsequent phases, was expanded to include additional sources. As information was gathered, it was synthesized with individual survey files.

On-site and archival findings were assembled and synthesized in preparation for review prior to drafting the final report. One set of survey file envelopes were labeled for VDHR; one set of manila file folders for the county. The appropriate documentation, labeled photographs and negatives, and site plans were placed in the appropriate envelope or file. USGS quadrangle maps and county-base maps were marked to indicate the surveyed properties for both VDHR and the county. All envelopes/files were checked for completion.

TASK 4: DSS

Information collected and recorded during the on-site field survey was entered into the Virginia Department of Historic Resources-Data Sharing System database (DHR-DSS). Data on each property surveyed was recorded as a single DSS record, as required by the survey program. At appropriate intervals throughout the project, each DSS property record was reviewed for accuracy and consistency. Upon review of the database and following corrections, tabular reports were generated. These reports provided organized data for analysis and incorporation into the Architectural Survey Report.

DHR-DSS was an important component of the survey, and will be a useful planning tool for Arlington County. The information in the database can be updated as needed and used to generate a variety of reports beyond those prepared for this study.

TASK 5: EVALUATION OF PROPERTIES

Reports generated by DSS were analyzed and properties considered potentially eligible as individual landmarks and as historic districts for listing in the Virginia Landmarks Register and the National Register of Historic Places were evaluated within the context of the survey database, historic themes, and historic context.

TASK 6: ARCHITECTURAL SURVEY REPORT

The Architectural Survey Report was prepared in conformance with the VDHR Guidelines for survey reports. Historic properties associated with the relevant themes were discussed in the historic context narratives. Illustrations, including photographs, maps, tables, charts, and other graphics were prepared. The draft document was distributed to the county and VDHR prior to final production.

TASK 7: PROJECT COMPLETION

All required products were prepared for the county and VDHR. The DSS documentation was submitted to VDHR. Two diskettes holding a copy of the text of the Architectural Survey Report in Microsoft Office Word 2003 were prepared. Ten (10) bound copies of the Architectural Survey Report were prepared (five for VDHR and five for Arlington County). Two sets of hard-copy survey forms, photographs, maps, and other materials were made ready for submission (one for VDHR and one for Arlington County). One set of negatives with inventory sheets was prepared for VDHR. All products were submitted to the appropriate organization as directed.

SURVEY FINDINGS

ARLINGTON COUNTY DATABASE HOLDINGS

The survey and documentation of properties in Arlington County was completed to the approved standards of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources. The results of the survey project are as follows:

Seven Hundred Fifteen (715) properties were recorded to the Reconnaissance Level. Each Reconnaissance-Level Survey Form recorded a single property, including primary and any secondary resources.

- Seven hundred fifteen (715) properties were evaluated as historic or significant to the historic context of Arlington County and fully surveyed to the reconnaissance level. Each form provides a detailed physical description of the primary resource as well as a brief description of the secondary resources on the property. It includes a brief evaluation of the property, placing it in its local historical and architectural context. Labeled, black-and-white photographs that adequately document the property's resources accompany each form. Adequate photographic documentation includes several views of the primary resource and a minimum of one photograph per historic secondary resource or group of secondary resources if they are located close together. Photographs illustrate the architectural character of the resource. A simple site plan sketch of the property indicating the relationship between primary and any secondary resources is included for each surveyed property. The site plan sketch indicates the main road and any significant natural features such as creeks and rivers. A copy of the relevant section of the county-base map is filed with each form. The survey area was marked in pencil on a USGS map.

ANALYSIS OF SURVEY FINDINGS

The VDHR-Data Sharing Software (DHR-DSS) is an online system developed to meet VDHR's computer needs and desires. Survey documentation prepared as part of Phase I through V were entered into VDHR-Integrated Preservation Software (VDHR-IPS), a system developed by the National Park Service and customized to best serve VDHR. All records entered into IPS have been converted into DSS by VDHR and are now available online. The documentation for Phases VI, VIIA-B, VIII, IX, X, and XI collectively totaled 6,086 properties and was entered into DSS. With the completion of the data entry for this first survey update phase, the master DSS database for Arlington County contains 11,604 properties recorded by EHT Tracerics since 1996.

Analysis

Statistical information was derived from the survey findings by producing computer-generated reports. These reports are designed to yield specific kinds of information for the appropriate analysis of survey findings. Some of the information entered into the database is factual, being based upon quantitative analysis; other information is valuative, and is based upon Tracerics' understanding and evaluation of architectural and historical data collected during the survey. The computer-generated reports represent both factual and valuative assessments, and provide statistics on important trends and aspects of the built environment of Arlington County.

The following analysis was prepared by architectural historians at Tracerics and is based upon a professional understanding of the historic properties and resources surveyed, taking into consideration the needs and requirements of Arlington County and VDHR.

- Identification of Properties

Each record in the computer represents a property that is a location defined by a perimeter measurement, such as a lot or parcel of land or a determined environmental setting. A total of 715 properties were identified and surveyed during the course of this update project. These properties were identified in two ways: first, by using the 1936 and 1959 Sanborn Insurance Maps of Arlington County, and the 1943 and 1948 Franklin Survey of Arlington County which indicates the sites of resources (i.e. the footprint of a building or structure) in conjunction with the building permit cards; second, through visual identification of primary resources that were not indicated on the historic maps but appeared to hold architectural significance associated with the recent past.

- Categorization of Properties

Each property record is initiated with the determination of a property category for the property as an entity. This categorization reflects the type of resource that is considered to be the primary resource and the source of the property's historicity. The five property categories are as follows: building, district, structure, site, and object. The definitions used are included in National Register Bulletin: How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation as follows:

Building: A building, such as a house, barn, church, hotel, or similar construction, is created to shelter any form of human activity. "Building" may also refer to a historically, functionally related unit, such as a courthouse and jail or a house and barn.

District A district possesses a significant concentration, linkage, or continuity of sites, buildings, structures, or objects united historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development.

- Site A site is the location of a significant event, a prehistoric or historic occupation or activity, or a building or structure, whether standing, ruined, or vanished, when the location itself possesses historic, cultural, or archeological value regardless of the value of any existing structure.
- Structure The term “structure” is used to distinguish from buildings those functional constructions made usually for purposes other than creating human shelter.
- Object The term “object” is used to distinguish from buildings and structures those constructions that are primarily artistic in nature or are relatively small in scale and simply constructed. Although it may be, by nature and design, movable, it is associated with a specific setting or environment, such as statuary in a designed landscape.

In Virginia, it is anticipated that a property will include at least one resource, usually considered its primary resource. The historic character of that resource is usually the basis upon which the determination of the property’s overall historic or nonhistoric status is made.

The proper categorization of a property is dependent on the proper identification of the primary resource. For example, a property that includes a large residence built in the 1870s and several outbuildings from the same period would be categorized as a “BUILDING.” Another property that includes a large residence built in 1995 near the foundation of an eighteenth-century farmhouse would gain its historic status from the archeological potential of the site that is composed of the foundation and its environs, not from the no longer extant original building nor from the new house; therefore, this property would be categorized a “SITE.”

- Determination of Historic Status

The identification of properties and their categorization was followed by the determination of a historic status for the property. For this survey, historic was defined as possessing the capacity to convey reliable historic information about the physical and cultural development of Arlington County. It was not interpreted as a measure of the level of significance of that information.

Properties were considered HISTORIC if:

- The primary resource was fifty years of age or more; or
- The resource possessed the capacity to convey reliable historic information about the physical and cultural development of Arlington County.

Properties were determined to be NON-HISTORIC if:

- The primary resource was less than fifty years of age;
- No primary resource was visually evident; or
- The primary resource was altered to a level that any historic integrity it might have possessed was significantly destroyed or obscured.

Buildings (primary)	715	0	715
Buildings (secondary)	387	249	139

- Primary Resources

For the 715 properties included in the database, seven primary resource types were identified throughout the survey update areas. The following report identifies the number of identified resource types for each property:

ARLINGTON COUNTY SURVEY: PRIMARY RESOURCE TYPE CONTAINED BY CONTRIBUTING PROPERTIES	NUMBER OF PRIMARY RESOURCES RECORDED
Apartment Building (Multiple Dwelling)	1
Church	2
Clubhouse	1
Commercial Building	1
Office/Office Building	1
School	1
Single Dwelling	711

The identification of the single-family dwelling has been consistent throughout the many survey phases. Noticeably, the number of resource types identified in each survey phase has varied as the on-site work has progressed northward. It has diminished as the survey moved north past Arlington Boulevard. Phase I recorded eleven primary resource types and Phase IV recorded seventeen types. Three types were identified during Phase VIIA and only two resource types were documented as part of Phase VIIB. With the addition of the community center, the same primary resource types were identified in the Phase VIII and Phase IX surveys. Phase X recorded six property types, including churches, a commercial building, a school and community center, apartments, and single-family dwellings. The final comprehensive survey identified five primary resource types, including a bank, cemetery, nature center, three parks, a pump house, and more than 1,000 single dwellings.

The survey updates focused on neighborhoods in the central part of the county along the metro corridor where various modes of mass transportation attract more residents. These surveys, therefore, captured a number of apartment buildings and multiple-family dwellings. Further, the double or twin house were recorded a number of times, reflecting the population density and need for housing in the areas included in this survey phase. Yet, the single-family dwelling dominated the survey areas, as has been the case throughout every survey effort. This most recent survey phase focused on neighborhoods to the north and south of the metro corridor, areas beyond public transportation. The focus was overwhelmingly the freestanding single-family dwelling.

- VDHR Historic Themes and Period Contexts

VDHR has defined eighteen cultural themes from prehistoric times to the present.

ARLINGTON COUNTY SURVEY: DHR THEMES	NUMBER OF ASSOCIATED PROPERTIES

Religion	2
Settlement Patterns	0
Social	1
Subsistence/Agriculture	0
Technology/Engineering	0
Transportation/Communication	0

Notably, the number of historic context themes identified during each phase is reduced as the on-site fieldwork progresses northward through the county. The greatest number of themes was recorded in Phase I, with eleven contexts noted. Phases II and III documented fourteen and nine themes, respectively. During Phase IV, the Industry/Processing/Extraction theme was identified for the first time. However, the seven other themes documented that year had been recorded in previous phases. In Phase V, only seven of the themes were noted. Phase VI documented eight themes. Phase VIIA recorded only three, while Phase VIIB documented two themes. Phases VIII, IX, and X recorded six themes. Phase XI of the comprehensive survey, documented seven themes. The survey updates identified the three most common themes—Architecture/Community Planning, Commerce/Trade, and Domestic—which is in keeping with the history of the areas recorded. This phase also included Education, Health Care/Medicine, Religion, and Social, all themes typically associated with developed residential neighborhoods.

RECOMMENDATIONS

A. Recommendations for Further Study

- Architectural Survey Update

The first phase of the survey update revisited only a portion of the Douglas Park neighborhood, specifically the area to the west of South Monroe Street and south of 16th Street South. It is recommended that the survey update continue in this historic neighborhood with a target date of 1958.

Moreover, the multiple phases of architectural survey undertaken by Tracerics comprehensively recorded historic buildings to a select target date due to the availability of archival resources at the time of the surveys. Additional information, specifically the building permit cards and historic maps, are now available and can be used to identify historic buildings not yet recorded. Therefore, it is recommended that those areas surveyed to the 1936 date should be further examined to ensure the proper documentation of resources constructed between 1936 and 1959. The building permit cards should be used along with the Sanborn Fire Insurance maps and the Franklin maps to ensure the dates of construction and documentation of the original owners and builders. Several neighborhoods have been comprehensively surveyed during the nomination of the community to the Virginia Landmarks Register and the National Register of Historic Places and, therefore, do not require additional survey work. Neighborhoods worthy of further review include:

Alcova Heights	1936
New Arlington-Douglas Park	1936
High View Park (Langston-Brown)	1936
Columbia Heights	1936
Glebeewood	1936

The number of historic properties to be recorded within each of these neighborhoods is not known without a windshield survey and study of the building permit cards along with the Sanborn Fire Insurance maps and the Franklin maps. However, their location primarily in the southern half of Arlington County suggests many historic buildings have been razed or so severely altered that they no longer retain integrity.

The following alphabetical list notes the date to which each neighborhood has been documented as of September 2012:

B. Evaluation for Designation

- Standards for Evaluation

The properties identified have been evaluated on a preliminary basis for their historic significance at the local, state, and national levels. As stated in the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Evaluation, evaluation is the process of determining whether identified properties meet defined criteria of significance and whether they should, therefore, be included in an inventory of historic properties determined to meet the established criteria.

In association with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Evaluation is the Secretary of the Interior's Guidelines for Evaluation. These guidelines describe the principles and process for evaluating the significance of the identified historic properties. In evaluating the historic resources of Arlington County, both the Standards and Guidelines for Evaluation were consulted. As a first step, the guidelines suggest that criteria used to develop an inventory of historic properties should be coordinated with the National Register of Historic Places. In the case of Arlington County, the evaluation process was conducted using the National Register of Historic Places criteria and the Virginia Landmarks Register criteria. The National Register of Historic Places is the official national list of recognized properties, which is maintained and expanded by the National Park Service on behalf of the Secretary of the Interior. The Virginia Landmarks Register criteria, established in 1966, are coordinated with those established for the National Register.

The National Register of Historic Places Criteria states:

The quality of significance in American history, architecture, archeology, and culture is present in districts, sites, buildings, and objects that possess integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association, and:

- A. That are associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history; or
- B. That are associated with the lives of persons significant in our past; or
- C. That embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or that represents the work of a master, or that possesses high artistic values, or that represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction; or
- D. That have yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Similarly, the Virginia Landmarks Register criteria are set forth in the legislation as follows:

No structure or site shall be deemed historic unless it has been prominently identified with, or best represents, some major aspect of the cultural, political, economic, military, or social history of the State or nation, or has had a relationship with the life of an historic personage or event representing some major aspect of, or ideals related to, the history of the State or nation. In the case of structures which are to be so designated, they shall embody the principal or unique features of an architectural style or demonstrate the style of a period of our history or method of construction, or serve as an illustration of the work of a master builder, designer or architect whose genius influenced the period in which he worked or has significance in current times. In order for a site to qualify as an archaeological site, it shall be an area from which it is reasonable to expect that artifacts, materials, and other specimens may be found which give insight to an understanding of aboriginal man or the Colonial and early history and architecture of the state or nation.

A second consideration cited by the guidelines suggests that the established criteria should be applied within particular historic contexts. In the case of Arlington County, the criteria were examined to determine how they might apply to properties within the given context. The historic contexts are synonymous with the eighteen historic themes developed by the VDHR and listed as follows:

Domestic Theme: This theme relates broadly to the human need for shelter, a home place, and community dwellings.

Subsistence/Agriculture Theme: This theme most broadly seeks explanations of the different strategies that cultures develop to procure, process, and store food.

Government/Law/Political Theme: This theme relates primarily to the enactment and administration of laws by which a nation, state, or other political jurisdiction is governed; and activities related to politics and government.

Health Care/Medicine Theme: This theme refers to the care of sick, elderly and the disabled, and the promotion of health and hygiene.

Education Theme: This theme relates to the process of conveying or acquiring knowledge or skills through systematic instruction, training, or study, whether through public or private efforts.

Military/Defense Theme: This theme relates to the system of defending the territory and sovereignty of a people and encompasses all military activities, battles, strategic locations, and events important in military history.

Religion Theme: This theme concerns the organized system of beliefs, practices, and traditions regarding the worldview of various cultures and the material manifestation of spiritual beliefs.

Social Theme: This theme relates to social activities and institutions, the activities of charitable, fraternal, or other community organizations and places associated with broad social movements.

Recreation and Arts Theme: This theme relates to the arts and cultural activities and institutions related to leisure time and recreation.

Transportation/Communication Theme: This theme relates to the process and technology of conveying passengers, materials, and information.

Commerce/Trade Theme: This theme relates to the process of trading goods, services, and commodities.

Industry/Processing/Extraction Theme: This theme explores the technology and process of managing materials, labor, and equipment to produce goods and services.

Landscape Theme: This theme explores the historic, cultural, scenic, visual and design qualities of cultural landscapes, emphasizing the reciprocal relationships affecting the natural and the human-built environment.

Funerary Theme: This theme concerns the investigation of gravesites for demographic data to study population, composition, health, and mortality within prehistoric and historic societies.

Ethnicity/Immigration Theme: This theme explores the material manifestations of ethnic diversity and the movement and interaction of people of different ethnic heritages through time and space in Virginia.

Settlement Patterns Theme: Studies related to this theme involve the analysis of different strategies available for the utilization of an area in response to subsistence, demographic, socio-political, and religious aspects of a cultural system.

Architecture/Landscape Architecture/Community Planning Theme: This theme explores the design values and practical arts of planning, designing, arranging, constructing and developing buildings, structures, landscapes, towns and cities for human use and enjoyment.

Technology/Engineering Theme: While the technological aspects of a culture form the primary basis of interpretation of all themes, this theme relates primarily to the utilization of and evolutionary changes in material culture as a society adapts to the physical, biological, and cultural environment.

After determining how the criterion applies, the Secretary of Interior's Guidelines for Evaluation suggests that the integrity of a property should be assessed. In evaluating the integrity, factors such as structural problems, deterioration, and abandonment should be considered if they have affected the significance of the property. In surveying the properties of Arlington County, the integrity of the resource was evaluated using the seven aspects as defined in National Register Bulletin: How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation. The aspects include location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. The seventh aspect, association, was not always evaluated while conducting on-site survey work, and often requires further archival research.

Based upon the state and national guidelines and criteria, all of the properties in Arlington County were evaluated for potential nomination to the Virginia Landmarks Register and the National Register of Historic Places.
