DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Little Cherrystone consists of two major building units plus at least two minor sections. The north wing contains the oldest portion, which is a frame, one-story structure. This wing, obviously built in two sections, has a broad, Flemish bond chimney with random glazed headers and an English bond foundation on the east front. At a right angle to this wing and connected by a narrow, two-story frame hyphen is a circa 1800, two-story brick structure with gable roof and exterior end chimney. The brick is laid in three-course American bond with queen closers. The nine-over-nine sash windows have thin Federalist muntins, architrave framing and plaster flat arches with double keystones. The fine cornice with its dentils, mutules and guttae are matched by the arched entrance doorway on the east front which uses pilasters, strapwork and pierced detailings. The doorway is unfortunately in a deteriorated condition. A west porch, which until recently also existed in a deteriorated condition, was removed and replaced by a frame wing.

The interiors in the original wing are extremely simple and reflect a later date. The corner fireplaces in the two original east rooms and the closed stair have been blocked up. But it is in the two rooms of the circa 1800 brick section where the exterior woodwork style is continued. The interior framing of the old entrance doorway, now a window, matches the exterior arch design, but the pilasters have been removed; architrave moldings frame all doors. The south room has a marbled dado combined with imitation ashlar. The chair rail has a frieze of alternating reeded and fluted panels. The cornice combines a cable design with a corbel motif repeated from the exterior cornice. The mantel consists of twin turned colonnettes on either side of the fireplace with a frieze of three sunbursts above, each of which swells gently outward in a low convex curve. The marbling is repeated around the sunbursts and at either end of the frieze are small lancet arched tabernacles.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

The old frame wing of Little Cherrystone was probably on the land when Col. Robert Wooding of Halifax gave to Thomas Hill Wooding "a parcel of land containing 200 acres of Pittsylvania County on the draughts of Great Cherrystone Creek ..." just after the latter was married in 1790. Thomas Wooding, who probably built the brick addition, was commander of his home militia in Pittsylvania in 1806 and served in the House of Delegates between 1799 and 1821.

As a collection of traditional Virginia architectural styles, Little Cherrystone is a valuable example, especially considering the pleasant contrast of size and shape among the various units. Its finely carved and painted woodwork, especially on the interior, is exceptional not only for the South Piedmont area but as an example of provincial Virginia design.
