In 1809 Joseph Funk purchased land near a spring (the land is listed on the tax rolls of 1810). The house which marks the beginning of the village of Singers Glen was probably built shortly after the time of purchase. Funk married twice; first to Elizabeth Rhodes in 1804 by whom he had five children and, second, to Rachel Briton in 1814 by whom he had nine children. There has been much speculation among Funk scholars that Rachel Briton may not have been Mennonite. There are strong hints of this in Funk's "Latitudinarianism" which he attributed to his wife and in his close connection with Cook's Creek Presbyterian Church, near Harrisonburg, Virginia.

Funk was an early translator of Mennonite doctrine into English. Among his works was the translation of Elder Peter Burkholder's Mennonite Confession of Faith in 1837 with Funk providing an introduction, explanation and footnotes. Many of the books were published on his own press, established in 1847 in a log cabin (since destroyed) near his house.

In his music career, Funk, was noted for his instruction in sacred music and for the publishing of music and religious books. With his sons he set up singing schools in Singers Glen and elsewhere in the Valley. He was influential in the evolution of the patent note system of musical notation, and his widely used hymnal, the Harmonia Sacra, went through twenty-two editions. Funk's press operated until 1878 when Ephraim Ruebush and Aldine S. Kieffer, Funk's grandsons, moved the publishing house to Dayton, Virginia.
