W.N. Seay House Buena Vista, Virginia

7. Description Summary and Site:

Built in 1889, the W.N. Seay House occupies a prominent position overlooking the City of Buena Vista, in eastern Rockbridge County, Virginia. From atop a small ridge that is perhaps the highest elevation within town limits, this 2-story Victorian is due west of Southern Virginia University (formerly Southern Seminary College), on West 26th Street. Left with just a single lot of less than one acre, campus buildings are now within several hundred feet of this prominent house that once served the funerary and furniture needs of the City. Sharing the small lot is also a garage/utility building to the NW of the house.

Detailed Description:

The W. N. Seay House is a handsome, relatively large 2-story, weatherboarded balloon-frame Victorian dwelling featuring an assortment of decorative elements that were popular at the time it was constructed, in 1889. It has a random fieldstone foundation, irregular T-footprint and complex interior plan, and a roof of two main gabled sections connected at right angles, covered with hand-crimped standing seam tin. Two brick chimneys with corbelled caps emerge from the center of the roof at the intersecting gables. A bracketed cornice surrounds the house with a friezeboard of pointed shingles. An additional gable appears on the west elevation, with a six-light, fixed-sash, triangular-headed window in the gable, identical to the window in the east gable end. The principal facade has a highly decorated, one-story, three-bay porch with turned, bracketed posts and jig-sawn balustrade. The porch has its own pointed shingle cornice, but without brackets. A very similar back porch wraps around the northeast corner of the house. Both porches have shallow hipped, standing seam roofs. The principal elevation also has two two-story polygonal bays—one in the front-gabled section and one at the east end of the side-gabled section—each with four slender, one-over-one, double-hung sash at each floor level, and paneled skirts below each set of windows and shingle cornices at both levels. The primary entrance has divided sidelights and lead-camed, abstract-patterned, stained-glass transom light. The other windows in the house are mostly paired, slender one-over-one sash like those in the polygonal bays, but there are two tall four-over-four double-hung wood sash in the east end of the house. All windows appear to retain original wood sash with intact surrounds.

The interior of the house features darkened pine woodwork, symmetrical moldings with paterae corner blocks, tall base moldings, multi-paneled doors with operable lighted transoms, and main stair in the central hall, with turned balusters and heavy newel posts on each floor. The stair rail balusters are attached to the stair ends, rather than being mortised into the treads, partially obscuring the carved scrollwork on the stringer. There is a secondary winder stair in a corner of the rear ell. The handrail has square, unturned balusters and newel post. French doors with fifteen panes of glass each lead from the stair hall to the dining room. The first floor fireplaces have embossed cast iron covers and intact original mantels. Like the house exterior, the interior possesses excellent integrity, with an unaltered floor plan, intact plaster walls and flooring, and preserved woodwork. Much of the woodwork retains its faux graining.

The c. 1900 garage/utility building sits 40-50 feet off the NW corner of the house. It is constructed of light framing clad in board-and-batten. It is square in plan, with a shallow pyramidal standing seam metal roof. It has a single garage bay with folding batten doors, but has a divided interior accessed via different doors—there are two single leaf doors on the west elevation and a small window near the NW corner. Like the house, the garage demonstrates excellent integrity.

The Seay House is located within close proximity to the Southern Virginia University campus (formerly Southern Seminary College) which is currently undergoing a period of growth and expansion. This led them to the purchase and razing (in 2005) of a fine Victorian House, not unlike the Seay House, that was located between the campus and the Seay House.

8. Statement of Significance

Summary Statement

W. N. Seay helped found Buena Vista City, where he established a planing mill in the late 1880s, purchased his house in 1890, and subsequently operated a funeral business and a furniture store. Funerary records and account books survive to document his business interests from 1907 to 1915. Seay served on the Buena Vista City Council from the time of its formation in 1892 and thereafter for twenty-two years. Active in the local Methodist Church, he also joined a number of fraternal orders. At his death in 1939 the Buena Vista News recognized Seay for his fifty years of civic leadership.

Justification of Criteria

The Seay House is eligible for the National Register under Criterion C for Architecture because of its excellent state of preservation, as well as its high quality of design and construction, incorporating unique and spirited Victorian style decorative elements. Houses of its type are quite rare in the area. The period of significance covers the dates of construction from 1889 (house) to c. 1900 (garage).

Acknowledgements

Francis Lynn, a resident of Buena Vista, provided substantial assistance with the historic context found in Section Eight of this document. Thomas Kastner, former president of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities (APVA), Rockbridge County Chapter, brought the Seay House to the attention of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources, which led to this nomination.

Historical Background

Born in Amherst County, Virginia, in 1850, William N. Seay moved to Rockbridge County in 1886. At the invitation of Buena Vista founder B. C. Moomaw, Seay selected fourteen acres from what is now Ridge Street to Factory Street in what is now Buena Vista City. There he established a planing mill and soon operated businesses as a dealer in lumber, a builder, and an undertaker. By 1890 he had purchased a house on Ridge Street immediately west of what would become Southern Seminary, now Southern Virginia University. By 1891 he had sold the planing mill and had devoted himself to his furniture and undertaking businesses.¹

Seay served on the Buena Vista town council for twenty-two years following establishment of the town in 1889 and incorporation of the city in 1892. After the land boom from 1889 to 1891, Seay apparently found himself overextended financially. The Buena Vista Advocate of October 30, 1891, reported that Seay's seven lots east of his residence, valued in total at $1,000, and his lots and improvements on the Seay block on Beech Street, valued at $10,500, were under assignment to attorney O. D. Batchelor, as was Seay's personal property, including a stock of furniture valued at $1,932.80 and coffins, fixtures, and two hearses valued at $1,109.88.

Seay survived his financial difficulties and kept his house, valued at $5,000 in 1890, and his undertaking business. The 1900 manuscript census for Buena Vista lists Seay as an undertaker and head of a household including wife Annie, son carpenter Walter W., daughter and teacher Maud L., son Homer H., and grandson Douglass W. The 1910 census lists Seay as a furniture dealer and undertaker, indicating that he had reestablished his furniture business by that date.

When the Seay House was purchased by Mrs. Clelon Mason and her late husband in 1964, they found piles of funerary and furniture store records in the attic. These primary source materials, donated to the Buena Vista Historical Society and archived at the Buena Vista Baptist Church office, provide detailed information on W. N. Seay's conduct of business and membership in various fraternal organizations from 1907 to 1914. In 1907 and 1908 Seay bought a coffin from Rankin Coffin & Casket Co. for $32.50 and charged Mrs. Hannah Bragg $40.00 for her husband's coffin. An envelope from about that date was printed "W. N. Seay & Son, The Furniture People, Everything to Furnish the Home, corner of Sycamore Ave. and 21st Street." An undated copy of a photograph from the account records collection shows a two-story brick commercial building with signage "W. N. Seay & Son FURNITURE" over the corner entrance of the 10-bay by 3-bay structure. The longer 10-bay façade probably faced Sycamore Avenue, while the 3-bay façade probably faced 21st Street. On another undated envelope was printed "W. N. Seay & Son, Furniture, Phone 33, Picture Frames Made to Order, Pictures and Easels, Stoves, Dishes, Jardiniers. . . ."

Bank statements from 1913 to 1915 detail the operations of Seay's undertaking business, including frequent expenditures for caskets, embalming fluid, flowers from Fallon Florist in Lynchburg, tombstones from J. H. Marsteller of Roanoke, and labor for gravedigging and hauling corpses and tombstones.² Also recorded are monthly dues paid for membership in various fraternal organizations: the

Order of the Golden Seal,³ the International Order of Odd Fellows,⁴ and Redmen.⁵

The Buena Vista News interviewed Seay on May 11, 1928 and described him as "Buena Vista's oldest citizen." The article noted Seay's twenty-two years of service on the Buena Vista town and city council and his forty-two years of service as a steward of St. John's Methodist Church. The story also praised Seay's progressive support of new state roads into Buena Vista, an interest perhaps reflecting his decision to move in 1886 to what would become Buena Vista because of the arrival by that time of the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Norfolk & Western railroads. When Seay died at eighty-eight, his Buena Vista News obituary, printed July 7, 1939, again mentioned his charter membership in St. John's Methodist Church and his many years of service on the Buena Vista City Council. The obituary cited Seay's membership in fraternal orders: the Odd Fellows, the Redmen, and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. In summation, the obituary highlighted William Nelson Seay's life accomplishments for over half a century in Buena Vista as a successful businessman in general manufacturing and undertaking and as an active civic and church leader.
