Waterford Historic District, Waterford, Virginia

Waterford is a splendid and little-altered example of a small inland 18th-century and early 19th-century mill town that is still preserved in its completely unaltered rural setting. Growing in three distinct stages - in 1750, 1800, and 1812 - each area of the expanded town is richly illustrated with good architectural examples of the typical buildings of that particular period. Waterford still has approximately 90 stone, brick, wood, and log historic structures. Of these 25 date from the 18th century, 40 are of the period 1801 to 1835, 15 were erected between 1836 and 1853, and 10 date from the 1854-1882 period.

There are almost no modern intrusions within the village itself and the beautiful original rural setting around the town has been preserved intact. The 90 surviving historic structures are constructed of a wide variety of building materials, including fieldstone, brick, frame, and log construction, and are comprised of good examples of typical Georgian, Federal and Greek Revival architecture.

The Waterford Foundation, a non-profit organization founded by a group of local residents in 1943, is dedicated to restoring the 18th and early-19th-century mill town as nearly as possible to its original appearance. The foundation has acquired approximately 10 of the original buildings and restored them; it has also successfully encouraged and assisted individual home owners in the restoration of their houses. Each October the Waterford Foundation sponsors a house tour and crafts exhibits of Waterford as a means of raising funds for the restoration project.

Statement of Significance

Waterford is a splendid and little-altered example of a small inland 18th-century early 19th-century mill town that is still preserved in its completely unaltered rural setting. Growing in three distinct stages - in 1750, 1800, and 1812 - each area of the expanded town is richly illustrated with good architectural examples of the typical buildings of that particular period. Waterford still has approximately 90 stone, brick, wood, and log historic structures. Of these 25 date from the 18th century, 40 are of the period 1801 to 1835, 15 were erected between 1836 and 1853, and 18 date from the 1854-1882 period.

History

In 1733 Amos Janney, a Quaker from Bucks County, Pennsylania, moved to Prince William County (now Loudoun County), Virginia, and built a house near the banks of Catoctin Creek, at the future site of Waterford. By 1741 he had induced a number of other Quakers from Bucks County to join him in Virginia; he had also erected a mill just across the stream from the site of the present one, 1 a miller's house, a smithy, and log Quaker meeting house, located about half a mile east of the mill. The small community, which also included four or five other dwellings, was then known as Milltown.

The existing large three-story brick mill is a merchant flour mill that was erected in 1830 and is the third mill structure to stand near the site of the original mill.

The original settlement was located in the northeast portion of Waterford at the junction of First, Main, and Bond Streets.

The first expansion of the town occurred in 1750, when Mahlon Janney inherited his father's mill and lands. He divided a portion of the land into house lots and laid out Main Street, from its junction with First Street on the west, to its intersection with Second Street on the east. The enlarged village was renamed Waterford in 1750, after Waterford, Ireland - the former home of one of the settlers. In 1761 the old meeting house was replaced by the existing two-story fieldstone structure, which also served as the town hall. The second expansion of the town occurred in 1800, when Main Street was again extended eastward up the hill as far as High Street. Existing historic houses along this portion of Main Street generally date from the period 1800-1815. The Virginia Assembly issued the first charter for the town in 1801. The community was incorporated in 1811 and a town council was formed. The third and final expansion of the town took place in 1812 when two new parallel streets, Second and High Street, were laid out - running from Main Street on the north to Factory Street on the south, and the land in this addition was divided into quarter-acre house lots. In 1814 a Presbyterian Church was constructed on land in the new addition, which was then known as "New Town." 3

By 1834 Waterford was a flourishing little mill village with 70 dwelling houses, two churches, six stores, two free schools, one merchant flour mill; one saw, grist, and plaster mill; two small cotton mills, a woolen factory, a bank, and four taverns. Its population of about 400 included one tanner, two house joiners, two cabinet makers, one chair maker, one painter, one boot-and-shoe manufacturer, two hatters, one tailor, and three doctors. The Baptists erected their existing church in 1852 and the Methodists constructed their present structure in 1879.

During the Civil War, sentiment in Waterford was strongly pro-Union, and a group called the Loudoun Rangers was recruited from Waterford and neighboring Lovettsville to fight for the Union cause. Although several skirminishes were fought in or near town and control of the village changed hands a number of times, the buildings of Waterford suffered little physical damage during the war.

Condition

There are almost no modern intrusions within the village itself and the beautiful original rural setting around the town has been preserved intact. The 90 surviving historic structures are constructed of a wide variety of building naterials, including fieldstone, brick, frame, and log construction, and are comprised of good examples of typical Georgian, Federal and Creek Revival architecture.

The Waterford Foundation, a non-profit organization founded by a group of local residents in 1943, is dedicated to restoring the 18th-early

The existing church, however, while situated on the original site, was built in 1883. The town of Waterford was legally enlarged to its present limits under the Virginia Acts of 1817-1818.

19th century mill town as nearly as possible to its original appearance. The foundation has acquired approximately 10 of the original buildings and restored them; it has also successfully encouraged and assisted individual home owners in the restoration of their houses. Situated in the Loudoun Valley seven miles northwest of Leesburg, the mill town of Waterford remains virtually unchanged from its eighteenth and nineteenth century appearance. Waterford is notable for the great variety of building materials used, including brick, stone, log and frame, as well as for the variety of architectural styles. Especially interesting are the brick mill (c.1750); the Arch House Row of stone, brick and wood (c.1750); the Camelot School, a two-story log building (c.1800); the neo-classic Baptist Church of 1850; and the romantic Victorian Presbyterian Church of 1882. A major factor in Waterford's character is the unspoiled open rolling landscape which surrounds the village and enhances its integrity.

The oldest settlement in Loudoun County, Waterford began as a small Quaker village about 1730. The first house built within the town limits, that of Asa Moore (c.1733), is still standing. Originally called Milltown because of the small industries there, the name was soon changed to Waterford in honor of Waterford, Ireland. The town was incorporated in 1810, and by 1834 it was a flourishing village of four hundred persons with some seventy houses, a tannery, a chair-maker, and a boot and shoe manufacturer. At one time there was also a woolen factory as well as several stores, a bank and tavern. Through careful private preservation efforts, most of Waterford remains as it was in the nineteenth century.
